Leaders Seek Train to Move Last of Bonus Vets

LIBBY TRACED TO DELAWARE

Today

What is Man, Indeed.
Up and Over the Rockies.
Small Shrimps and Whales.
On to Proud San Francisco.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MONTELLO, Nev., Aug. 6.

THIS IS written on the Union Pacific train carrying fast express to the Pacific Coast, and fast means fast. The train a little while ago ran ninety-five miles in one hour and six minutes. The sun went down yesterday, slowly "taking its time" as though sorry to leave the beautiful hills and plains of Western Wyoming, six thousand feet above the sea.

You might well travel far, to see such a sky, a pale, yellow blue, thin wisps of gray clouds stretching from mountain to mountain. You feel that you are really on solid ground, half a continent on either side, an ocean back of you, another, bigger, ahead of you. Everything is calm, restful as it is now, among these mountains; so it will be ten thousand years after you are dead.

TO THE NORTH lies Cody, named for "Buffalo Bill" Cody. Only a few years ago he rode about here, killing bison, to feed workmen building the Union Pacific, killing Indians to protect the workers.

Later, when he had turned showman, and this writer saw him performing before Queen Victoria, he had written his story "How I Slew Yellow Hand." Perhaps he has since met Yellow Hand, for we must assume that only one happy hunting ground is provided for Indians and whites and perhaps Yellow Hand has forgiven him, for making that story one-sided.

UP THE EASTERN side of the Rocky Mountains, backbone of the continent, number nine pulls past Sherman, Wyo., more than seven thousand feet high, where stands the monument to the great Civil War fighter; then down to Ogden, Utah, where the Standard Examiner publishes this column, and all the news.

AT OGDEN the road changes to the Southern Pacific. E. H. Harriman had them both and ran them as one road. Silly government compelled a separation, thinking it knew more about railroading than railroad men, and that cheapening business into small units makes it better.

WHEN YOU WAKE early and look out at the mountains of Western Wyoming your mind and view of life change completely, and you understand how the Psalmist felt when he wrote:

"When I consider the heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou have ordained, what is man, that Thou art mindful of him, and the Son of Man that Thou visitest him."

THE BOOK OF PSALMS was written in a quiet little country, tiny mountains, small rivers. In these mountain ranges you would use a microscope to find Mount Ararat. It might be tucked away in a sheep pasture.

Had the Psalmist seen this country he would have put in something about the mountains and would not have mentioned man, any more than you would mention a caterpillar crawling over Pikes Peak. We never can know what becomes of us humans after we stop our crawling, and these mountains and the high blue sky give you the blessed certainty that it does not matter.

NOW THE TRAIN rolls into the fertile plain where, long ago, Brigham Young stopped his caravan, saying:

"This will do."

They had driven their wagons through all those miles of mountains and plain, wonderful men and women that they were, far from men, seeking the right to live according to conscience, which dictated among other things, several wives.

They established a great state, and established polygamy, then found that they did not care for it after all. So it is. We pursue the phantoms of hope, catch them, and find them dull.

ANYONE COULD have told Brigham Young that one good wife is enough for any man, and far more than the average man deserves. If any "poly" were to be tolerated, it might better be "polyandry," meaning several husbands, a system which once prevailed among primitive people and still persists.

For a wonderful description of what it might be, from the ladies' viewpoint, read Montesquies' "Letters Persanes." You will find a translation in your public library.

Reading the "Persian letters" you will become acquainted with "that prince of the human intellect," Montesquies and perhaps graduate to his "Spirit of Laws." Young reporters and advertisement writers should read that book, in which whole chapters contain fewer than half a dozen lines each. Brevity is important.

It is fortunate for America that the Mormons, impelled by the greatest driving force, LOVE OF FREEDOM, came to these fertile lands among the mountains. They developed and built, replacing with roads the trails of deer and bears.

About one thousand miles west of here one of their roads, running down to the Pacific Ocean, goes through the writer's Mohave desert ranch, at Hodge, passes under the ranch house, and on down through the mountain pass.

You still see the deep wagon wheel ruts, and imagine the

STOCKS RISE IN WAVE OF BUYING

Steel Makes $8 Gain in Sensational Session, Leaders Sweep Up

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Bullish enthusiasm which reached its crest toward the closing minutes of trading swept prices up from $2 to more than $12 a share on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Buying poured into the market throughout the two-hour session, attaining its climax in the final half-hour when it appeared that buyers were willing to pay almost any price to obtain their favorites.

U. S. Steel closed at 41½.

Railroad stocks, which had been sluggish in recent market advances, raced up rapidly. Union Pacific advanced more than $9 to $63 a share. Santa Fe was up $7 to $44. New York Central stepped up $3 or so.

The car loadings report for the week showing an increase of 9,557 cars over the preceding week, proved to be the tip-off for renewed bullish activities.

Stocks leaped ahead in sensational style again today with the market expanding to the largest proportions yet witnessed on the present advance. The movement was broad and well-led, going forward under the leadership of American Telephone, Steel, Westinghouse and a dozen others of the famous "blue chips" of sad memory.

Prices at the start were from one to two dollars above last night's finish and these early gains were steadily extended. The volume of trading during the first hour was at the rate of over 6,000,000 shares for a five-hour day.

Market circles attributed some of the buying to shorts, trapped by the continuous rise, but there was a definite feeling in the street that public buying was gradually expanding.

Widespread reports of business betterment involved the smaller industries as a rule, but traders felt this would inevitably show its effects in the great employment centers.

Formation of a $50,000,000 syndicate to aid in stabilizing commodity prices was expected to be announced momentarily.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—Search has been launched for ring-leaders of a mob which lynched Raphael Durzo, Italian resident of the village of Axtla in the state of San Luis Potosi, who had been held for the murder of a woman.

The lynch mob broke into the local jail, abducted Durzo and beat him to death.

Abandon Hope for 21 Trapped in Mine

TOKIO, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—Hope was abandoned today for the rescue of 21 miners trapped in the Sorachi coal mine at Hokkaido after a fire-damp explosion. The death list was officially placed at 57. Of the original 59 entrapped, only two were brought out alive. Thirty-six bodies were recovered.

Fear for Kidnaped Banker

International News Service.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 6.—A manhunt for the kidnapers and possible murderers of John B. Colegrove, 65-year-old banker, culminated here early today in the capture of Emilio Puzzuloi, 32, of Detroit, and James Gammaitoni, 37, of Gammaitoni, brother of James, had been hunted since late last night when Colegrove was dragged out of his home at Taylorville, 26 miles from here, and carried off in an automobile.

Immediately following the arrest of the two men, police and Sheriff's deputies organized a search for the banker. They feared he might have been slain.

BLOODSTAINS FOUND

Gammaitoni and Puzzuloi were arrested in an automobile which, according to authorities, resembled the machine in which Colegrove was spirited away from his Taylorville home. Bloodstains were found on the car, police said.

Sheriff Sam T. Metcalf, of Sangamon County, said that officers searching the men at the county jail found a bill-fold containing $30 with Colegrove's name on it, and several railroad passes made out to Colegrove.

Colegrove was under a one to three-year prison sentence following conviction with the failure of the J. B. Colegrove and Company State Bank of Taylorville, a $1,000,000 institution. He was found guilty of accepting deposits when he knew the bank was insolvent.

A previous trial for embezzlement ended in conviction and reversal on appeal and a second trial on the same charge resulted in his acquital.

BELIEVED TORTURED

The kidnaping, police believed, may have been engineered by disgruntled depositors who may have tortured the elderly banker in an effort to make him reveal the hiding place of money which he was charged during his trial with having hoarded.

Gammaitoni and Puzzploi were subjected to questioning. Gammaitoni police said, was believed to have lost $5,000 in the failure of Colegrove's bank.

Man Hurt as Wagon Falls in Incline Pit

A horse was killed and a man injured this morning when a wagon loaded with potatoes plunged into the pit at the foot of the Seventeenth Street Incline in Spring way. Samuel Schwartz, 37, of 807 Ledlie street, driver, was taken to West Penn Hospital, suffering bruises and lacerations.

Police say the wagon was being driven off the car after descending from Cliff street, when the car suddenly moved upward. The wagon fell back and dragged the horse into the pit.

Wife Wins Contest For Gun, Kills Mate

GRANITE CITY, Ill., Aug. 6.—(INS.)—How a young wife raced her husband to a hidden revolver and won, shooting the husband to death in defense of the lives of her two children and herself, was told police today.

James Taylor, 38, was dead when an ambulance carried his body, riddled by four bullets, to a hospital. Mrs. Victoria Taylor, 32, told police she shot her husband after he threatened to kill her and the children.

SEEK TRAIN FOR LAST 800 VETS

Bonus Army Remnant Demands 'Cushions,' Spurns Trucks

BULLETIN.

A special train of 12 coaches and a baggage car left Pittsburgh shortly after noon today to evacuate the remaining veterans from Johnstown.

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 6.—Thwarted in earlier efforts to clear Camp McCloskey of the last remnants of the tattered Bonus Expeditionary Force, leaders sought today to charter a train to complete the evacuation.

Eddie Atwell, representing Commander W. W. Waters, and Mayor Eddie McCloskey carried on separate negotiations with the Pennsylvania Railroad while announcement was made that funds from the B. E. F. treasury would be used to defray transportation.

There were 400 Pennsylvanians, 300 New Yorkers, 50 each from Massachusetts and Connecticut and a scattering from other states to be moved

Atwell declared:

"I don't want it said that I sent some of my people out of here in the luxury of cushioned passenger coaches and the rest

BAN DOWNTOWN 'RED' RALLY

A cordon of 45 mounted and foot police, including 20 detectives, was ordered thrown about the postoffice today by Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh to frustrate a Communistic demonstration to protest the government's treatment of the bonus marchers in Washington, scheduled for 12:30 p. m. in front of the building.

The protest meeting was reported sponsored by the Workers' Ex-service Men's League, Pittsburgh Post, and indorsed by the International Labor Defense of Pittsburgh.

Walsh ordered Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey and Inspector Harry Mellon to detail a mounted and foot force to "keep the crowds moving." Inspector Dorsey said he would have 25 more men in reserve, "just in case anything does happen."

Mrs. Gann Guarded; Caller Frightens Her

WASHINGTON, Aug 6.—(INS.)—Mrs. Dolly Gann, half sister of Vice President Charles Curtis, slept during the night with a special police guard around her house. The guard was placed when she reported a roughly-dressed man called at her home and asked for the Vice President. Told he was not in, he asked:

"When will he be?"

Walker Opens Fight Against Murder Indictment

BULLETIN.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Libby Holman Reynolds, the missing torch singer, will come to Winston-Salem in "considerably less than a week" to answer to charges growing out of the fatal shooting of Smith Reynolds, her millionaire husband, Benet Polikoff, one of her attorneys, said today.

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 6.—While counsel employed here were planning a way to keep Libby Holman Reynolds out of jail, Sheriff Transou Scott extended his search for the former Broadway star indicted jointly with Ab Walker on a charge of murdering her husband, Smith Reynolds, tobacco millionaire.

Sheriff Scott received information from Hamilton County, Ohio, where Libby had been staying at the home of her sister, Mrs. Myron Kahn, that an automobile was seen in front of the Kahn residence on July 24 at 10:30 p. m. The license number was traced to the ownership of Mrs. John King Jenney, of Montchanin, Del., a close friend of Libby and a niece of Pierre du Pont.

TELEGRAM SENT

The following telegram was sent to Sheriff Irving J. Hollingsworth, of New Castle County, near Wilmington, Del., by Sheriff Scott:

"I hold capias for arrest of Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds on charge of murder based on grand jury indictment. I have information she is with Mrs. John King Jenney, of Montchanin, Del. Please arrest Mrs. Reynolds and wire me. If Mrs. Jenney is not in Montchanin wire me her whereabouts if possible."

AIR ACES TO AID LANCASTER

By LARRY SMITS
International News Service.

At Gilmartin's suggestion, a subpena was issued today for Chamberlin and rushed to New York.

A feeling of brotherhood between the peace-time aces who braved dangers of the higher spaces has prompted their voluntary appearance on behalf of their comrade, on trial for his life, charged with the murder of Haden Clarke.

Feeling assured it had established the love of Capt. Lancaster for his "Chubbie"—Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller—as a motive for the killing of Clarke, the state today planned to call "Chubbie" herself back to the witness stand.

It was the purpose of State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne to show that "Chubbie" was swayed by emotion almost equally intense in her account of the killing of the young writer.

Julia Lydig Hoyt Asks Reno Divorce

RENO, Nev., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Mrs. Julia Calhern, known on the stage as Julia Lydig Hoyt, the society actress, filed suit for divorce yesterday against Louis Calhern, of New York. She charges cruelty.

They were married in Norton, Conn., September 17, 1927. She requsted that papers in the case be sealed and the hearing be held behind closed doors.

WALKER OUSTER HEARING SET

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—James E. Finegan, leader of one of the civic groups that asked the removal of Mayor James J. Walker, announced today that Gov. Roosevelt, in reply to his rebuttal, informed him Mayor Walker had been requested to appear before the Governor in the executive chamber in Albany next Thursday at 1:30 p. m. to answer the removal charges.

Finegan sent his rebuttal to the Governor two days ago. His group was one of two that had requested the Governor to remove Mayor Walker as a result of charges brought to light at hearings of the Hofstadter legislative committee.

Samuel Seabury, counsel to the committee, also had filed charges against Walker with the Governor, but did not specifically request the Mayor's removal.

Girl Says Man Stole Kiss At Point of Gun

Posing as a city policeman, an armed man early today at pistol point forced Miss Ann Ford, of 5910 Center avenue, to kiss him, it was testified in East End Police Court.

The man was identified as Jack Piper, 30, of 3415 Louise street.

With him was Ernest (Whitey) Whitworth, 30, of 2506 Shiras street, much fired and hired city policeman, now under suspension for non-payment of debts, police said.

Both were held for further investigation.

Mrs. Lillian Appleby, owner of the apartment, which she shares with Miss Ford, described the entry of the two men into her home. An acquaintance of Whitworth, she said, Piper introduced himself as a policeman and announced they had come to take possession of the apartment for the night.

Walking across to Miss Ford, Piper drew his revolver, it was charged, and forced her to give him a kiss.

Thomas Death Plot Suspect Seized

TORONTO, Ontario, Aug. 5.—(AP.)—Daniel Malone, described by police as a "Sinn Feiner of the most radical type," was held today on suspicion of a plot to assassinate J. H. Thomas, British secretary for dominions.

He was arrested last night after police had received word of a projected attack on Thomas, expected here for the opening of the Welland ship canal.

Ulster Constable Shot, Fear Riots

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—A member of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, traveling homeward from Dublin, was shot in the jaw today on the Free State side of the border by one of four men believed to be members of the Irish Republican army.

It was feared rioting between Ulsterites and members of the Irish Republican army would break out anew as a result of the incident.

Woman Endurance Flier Forced Down at Sea

COWES, England, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—The Hon. Mrs. Victor Bruce, famous British airwoman and globe traveler, today was forced down for a second time within a week while attempting to set a new refuelling endurance flight record.

Lifeboats were sent out to bring in Mrs. Bruce and the two men pilots with her after their large cabin amphibian was brought to rest on the water less than 16 hours after the start.

Trouble began with a gas tank leak and the failing of one engine. The engine was restarted, but the fuel gave out before the ship could gain the necessary altitude. There was not time for the refuelling ship, piloted by the flier's husband, to get into action.

Mrs. Bruce and the two pilots planned to begin a third attempt tomorrow if the weather is favorable. She aimed to beat the 27-day record established in 1930 by the Americans, O'Brine and Jackson, flying over St. Louis.

Mrs. Bruce's first attempt, Monday, ended an hour after the start when ignition trouble developed.

CITY COUNCIL GETS POWER TO IMPOSE NEW TAXES

STERLING BILL CONFERS WIDE AUTHORITY

Field for New Levies Nearly Unlimited Void After 3 Years

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6. Almost unlimited power to tax anything it pleases is at the disposal of the City Council of Pittsburgh today, to use if it chooses.

The new taxing authority is conferred in the Sterling Act, which became a law when it was signed late yesterday by Gov. Pinchot.

By its provisions, the City Council can assess men taxes against cats, false teeth, polka-dot neckties, all-day suckers, the second pair of trousers in two-pants suits, or anything else which appeals to councilmanic fancy. There is almost no limit on what Council may tax, and absolutely no limit on the amount.

The new law permits Council to levy taxes on "persons, transactions, occupations, privileges, subjects and personal property" within the city.

THREE-YEAR LIMIT

Only two restrictions are imposed. The special power ends June 1, 1935. No tax may duplicate a state tax, and if the state selects the same subject the city has chosen for taxation, the city's levy becomes inoperative.

The new law does not compel any new tax to be created. The decision is up to Council.

The money raised becomes available for general revenue purposes. That will permit the money to be used for relief of the unemployed, or to balance the city budget, or to meet payrolls or casual needs of the city, or to reduce present taxes on real estate.

ORDINANCE RULE

Pittsburgh city officials have promises not to run wild in thinking up new taxes. Before any new tax is assessed, they promised, they will invite civic leaders, representatives of payers of heaviest taxes, and others to a conference to decide what ought to be done. If any new tax is levied, they have said, the added levy will not increase the amount of the city budget but will be used to reduce the taxes on real estate.

An ordinance must be passed by Council imposing a new tax before it becomes effective. Power is granted for Council to creat new bureaus and employes to assess and collect new levies.

Drys Plot Alliance Against Bingham

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Plans for an alliance between organized drys of Connecticut and the "independent Republicans" to prevent the renomination of United States Senator Hiram Bingham were revealed yesterday by the Rev. Ralph H. White, former state head of the Anti-Saloon League.

Mr. White said those who oppose Bingham "do not believe he has supported many important measures advocated by Herbert Hoover."

HURLEY LEADS 80TH DIVISION PARADE

War Secretary Enjoys Reunion; Cronkhite Reviews March

HARRISONBURG, Va., Aug. 6.—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley led the parade of his old outfit, the 80th Division, here last night as the Blue Ridge veterans wound up the second day of their thirteenth annual reunion. Hurley said:

"It's been a long time since I marched with the boys and I got a big kick out of it. They are a fine crowd of fellows."

The parade was reviewed by Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, who commanded the division in France; Lieut. Rodney S. Bonsall, of Philadelphia, national commander, and other notables.

500 VETS MARCH

More than 500 of the Blue Ridge veterans were in line and showed that the years have not taken the military snap out of them. A carnival followed the parade with music by bands, drum and bugle corps and orchestras. The veterans enjoyed a barbeque and watermelon party at a nearby mountain resort yesterday afternoon.

GREETED BY CRONKHITE

Gen. Cronkhite greeted the veterans at the opening convention session. Gen. William A. Mitchell, former U. S. air corps chief, also spoke, urging modernization of America's national defense and predicting that the next war will be decided in the air.

Officers were to be elected, next year's reunion site chosen, and resolutions adopted at the final convention session today.

The annual divison banquet will be held tonight. The reunion closes tomorrow with memorial services.

VETS DEMAND TRAIN TO QUIT JOHNSTOWN

1,000 Spurn Trucks; McCloskey Clashes With Police

in box cars. If I have to use every cent in our treasury, I'll keep my promise."

McCloskey said:

"I got them trucks and they refused them. I'm trying to get a train. We can't send them home in Pullman cars, you know."

The attitude of the men towards McCloskey has grown a trifle nasty in the last two days. The scrappy little Mayor promised them a ride "on the cushions;" free gas and oil for those traveling in automobiles and trucks of their own and food for everybody.

He sent three train loads over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to the West; filled up the tanks of the motor cavalcade and gave the owner of each machine a dollar. The money come from B. E. F. funds subscribed by sympathetic friends throughout the country. The gasoline and oil, it was learned, must be paid for and the only funds available are what remain in the B. E. F. treasury.

FOOD SHORTAGE

The food situation has become a serious problem in the camp.

A warehouse provided by Mayor Eddie in Johnstown is reported to be well stocked with food, but the majority of the army went to bed hungry last night. Except for those few groups which salvaged enough for their own needs in the food riot the night before last, the men had to satisfy the gnawing pains of hunger with a cup of coffee. The women and children did not fare so badly.

A check at the camp this morning revealed conditions unchanged. The group slept fitfully. Men sprawled on the ground around blazing bonfires. The chill, raw air made them uncomfortable outside and hunger made them uncomfortable within.

Two questions were on everybody's lips:

"What are we going to eat?"
"How are we going home?"

TRUCKS REFUSED

The reason given by the men for refusing the hard, bouncing trucks was the lack of assurance they would be taken care of beyond the Pennsylvania state line. Most of the remaining veterans are from New York, New Jersey and other eastern points. They prefer box cars to the trucks and their mood today indicated they would not object seriously to a freight train instead of the promised "cushions."

Yesterday's evacuation was fraught with a hundred petty obstacles. Each group and each individual had his or her particular problem. The most frequent query was:

"Where shall we go. We have no home."

Mayor Eddie's advice was:

"Go back where you came from and report to your community charity."

LEGION MEETING

In the midst of all this misery and trouble the state meeting of American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps blared itself to sleep utterly oblivious to their less fortunate buddies. A parade of Legionnaires last night filled the streets with noise and confusion for nearly three hours. The bonus vets stayed in camp.

Mayor McCloskey, earlier in the day, had refused to head the Legion parade. He explained:

"It's not that I have any grievance against the Legion, mind you. But I just can't think of this merry-making going on while the rest of the boys are living in such misery."

The Mayor had another "run-in" with the police department when the chief of police refused to carry out orders for a raid on the American Legion home. Chief Briney, in reply to the Mayor's demands, said:

"All right, Mayor—give me a warrant and I'll serve it."

FEARED TROUBLE

The mayor raged:

"A warrant—you want a warrant for an open violation of the law. Go down and do your duty and God help you if you don't. I'm telling you if you let these fellows in their pretty uniforms get cock-eyed drunk around here tonight there's going to be plenty of trouble.

"What do you think would happen if a bunch of these dressed up soldiers should take a sudden notion to go out and visit the camp? I'm telling you—the responsibility is all yours."

There was no raid, however, and no trouble at the camp.

SOAP MAKERS HIT FAKERS

Three nationally-known soap manufacturers today had agreed to unite in the prosecution of persons redeeming soap coupons with soap of an inferior quality, it was announced by officials of the Werk Company. The other companies are Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company and Lever Brothers Company.

The action followed the arrest of five Duquesne men by East End police late Thursday afternoon, while, police say, they were making a house-to-house canvas in that section, collecting distributed soap coupons and giving holders a cheap soap in return.

French Creek Canal Boosters Pleased

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 6.—Proponents of the Allegheny River-French Creek canal route hailed the adverse report of Army engineers regarding the Beaver Valley project as a victory and hope for favorable consideration of the route through this section. They pointed to slackwater navigation already in effect to Rimerton, and plans for additional dams in the Allegheny.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has signed the Graham House bill, restoring $364,200 to the Pymatuning Dam appropriation, which has abated by enactment of the 1931 Talbot Act. The bill restores the appropriation to the $1,500,000 figure carried by the 1931 act.

POST HERE AIDS BONUS VETS

A three-ton load of assorted foodstuffs was distributed to families in the Johnstown bonus camp by representatives of Perry Highway Post, American Legion, and residents of the Perry Highway district. The food, collected by members of the post, was given directly to family groups in the camp.

The Legionaires in charge of the truck reported many mothers fed waiting children as soon as the food was handed them.

BOLIVIA READY FOR ATTACK

By PERCY FORSTER
International News Service.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 6.—Bolivia planned to open a general offensive against Paraguayan positions in the disputed Chaco region today, the one hundred seventh anniversary of Bolivian independence, according to reports from La Quiaca, Argentina, on the Bolivian frontier.

A special correspondent wired the Salta, Argentina newspaper Intransigente that 150 Bolivian airplanes were ready for action at Villazon, while hostilities were known to be under way at Fort Presidente Ayala.

Paraguay also was preparing a large-scale offensive, according to semi-official information from Ascunsion, Paraguayan capital, concentrating her efforts at Puerto Suarez. Meanwhile peace negotiations remained as fruitless as ever.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—The Argentine government today officially announced it did not intend to declare a moratorium on its foreign debt.

BANDITS ROB SHOE STORE

County detectives today examined a safe in the Hanover Shoe store, 237 Eighth avenue, Homestead, for finger prints of two young men who bound and gagged H. A. Saville, 39, manager, and stole $125 from the cash register.

Saville told police that one of the men covered him with a revolver, at 6 o'clock last evening, forced him into a rear room where they bound and gagged him with adhesive tape. They took the money from the cash register and searched a safe. After the bandits fled Saville managed to attract the attention of Dale Anderson. Thomas Boeno and Peter Churchill employed in a nearby store, who released him.

stern faces of "Mormon saints." And the sun bonnets of their patient wives.

NOW THE RAILROAD is passing straight across Great Salt Lake, over the famous Harriman "cut-off." The Mormons could not have imagined that, but Harriman could. It was not in his nature to go around a lake if he could cut across it.

Once that lake took in water and it flowed out again. Now there is no outlet. All the salt that comes in stays, and some day the lake will be solid salt, and Utah will have to build an artificial lake to hold the water, or otherwise dispose of it.

DAN S. SPENCER, oldest official of the Union Pacific, who meets you at Ogden; his friends, A. Smith, editor, and Frank Francis, who writes sound philosophy which he calls "News and Views," all agree that the railroad will do it without troubling the state.

Eugene Troughber, of the Salt Lake Tribune, offers the comforting suggestion that the new lake will not be needed for at least a million years, so it is unnecessary to worry.

LONG WHITE ribbons of sea gulls fly over the intensely salt water, seeming to play follow the leader. Their monotonous diet consists of tiny gray shrimps, smaller than the end of your little finger, thin as a toothpick, as salty as salt itself.

Nature keeps her balance by providing for each creature something that will eat it. She had a particularly good idea when she invented man, the animal that eats everything.

THE NORTH whale eats in millions of creatures smaller than those salt shrimps, catching them on its rows of whalebone, and blowing out the water that brings in the food. Man sees the whale "blow," kills him, makes his fat into oil that once provided light for students, and now provides soap, almost as important as light.

Life on this earth is complicated, but beautifully arranged. The citizen out here tells you there is nothing alive in that lake except shrimps. But the shrimps find something living, too small for man to see.

It is humiliating but interesting to reflect that in the universe there are doubtless beings in whose eyes we humans are but shrimps inhabiting an utterly unimportant little earth ball, not large enough to have its name in their encyclopedia.

NOW COMES Nevada, and soon Reno, which stands for freedom of the wrong kind. At Montello, Nev., this copy goes to telegraph wires that send it in all directions, while Number Nine, now a Southern Pacific train, continues toward the Pacific, to Oakland, and its world's finest airport, great coast manufacturing city of the future, and to San Francisco.

In that Golden Gate metropolis every inhabitant, from the weanling child to Clarence Lindner, Commander Kingsbury, of Standard Oil, and Herbert Fleischhacker will admit that San Francisco is the "only great city" west of New York, London and Paris, with many things possessed by none of those metropolises, and everything that any of them has, only better. Come and see, as one of the four beasts says in Revelations.

Seek Release of Woman Jailed for Killing Bird

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 6.—Hope was held out today that Mrs. Anna Chess, 36, of Fairchance, serving a 20-day sentence in the county jail for the killing of a flicker, a song bird protected by law, would be released to return home to her husband and two children. A movement was started yesterday to release the woman and the District Attorney's office was requested to take some action.

When arrested in her home, Mrs. Chess readily admitted that she had killed the bird and prepared it in her home as food for her hungry family. In default of a $10 fine and $10 costs she was committed to jail. Assistant District Attorney J. Clark Glassburn said he hopes to reach some plan to present to the court today for the woman's release.

Joseph Chess, the husband and the children, Joe, 8, and Neutche, 10, waited at their home all day yesterday, hoping the wife and mother would be sent home to them.

A message to the prisoner from her two boys, asking her to come home, was received at the jail and Mrs. Chess replied:

"Oh, if I only could. I'd be the happiest woman in the world."

From her cell, Mrs. Chess said:

"I didn't do anything and yet they put me in here. Just all because of a little bird. My boys are trying to take the blame, but I did it. I took the bird from a stump in the back yard and some people told me to kill it and eat it. We were hungry and it smelled so good as I fried it. Then came the officer who arrested me. I told the squire the truth about it and asked for time to pay the fine.

"I took in washings to save money to pay. One woman who owes me $6 moved to Pittsburgh without paying me and others can't pay."

Fight Isn't Over, Bonus Marcher Tells Club

O. C. Green, a bonus marcher, told the Henry George Club yesterday that the night before the veterans were driven out of Washington the current jest was:

"We've been using bricks for pillows, and if the police come, we're going to have a pillow fight."

The fight is not over yet, Green told his hearers. He was on his way to his Wyoming home, where he intends to help organize the Khaki Shirts. He envisages a national party, powerful enough to weigh heavily in the November election. He believes Commander Waters will retain its leadership. He said:

"The B. E. F. is 100 per cent behind Waters. He is just an average veteran, thinks as we do. Under him we shall present a united front. Twenty thousand vets are going home feeling as I do."

Green visited the Henry George Club because of his interest in the single tax theory and its relation to the bonus and unemployment question.

Walker Opens Fight Against Murder Indictment

ment of Libby and Walker was touched off today.

A habeas corpus writ was obtained by Bailey Lilpfert, counsel for Walker, which will be argued before Judge A. M. Stack, of Superior Court, today.

At the same time two local attorneys engaged by Alfred Holman, father of Libby, indicated that the Broadway actress would surrender to authorities "within two or three days."

The legal move will strongly affect the case of both defendants, as it will cause the evidence on which the grand jury returned the murder indictments to be brought to light.

The court will later be asked to set the specific charge against Walker based on the evidence shown by the authorities.

MOTION FOR BAIL

If the charge is lowered from first degree murder to second degree murder, or manslaughter, a motion for bail for Walker will be made.

A first degree murder charge does not permit any bail to be granted a defendant.

The ruling on the habeas corpus writ will necessarily affect the status of Libby, jointly indicted for the murder with Walker.

The writ formally called upon Sheriff Scott to produce Walker in court. The 19-year-old defendant has been in jail since the indictment was brought in by the grand jury.

Benet Polikoff and William Graves, local counsel for Libby, after a long conference with Holman, made the following announcement:

"Mr. Alfred Holman, father of Mrs. Smith Reynolds, came to Winston-Salem today in the hope that he might be able to arrange bond for his daughter's appearance here at such a time as the court might direct and thereby spare his daughter the discomfort of an arduous journey in her present condition. She is still suffering from shock and is an expectant mother.

"She will not require that the state of North Carolina request her extradiction; she will voluntarily return to North Carolina and submit to the jurisdiction of the court in the full confidence that she will receive a fair and impartial trial."

WALKER'S PLEA

In the habeas corpus petition, with the order signed by Judge A. M. Stack, of Superior Court, at his home, after court hours, the reasons why Walker should be freed under bond were given as follows:

"That the imprisonment of Walker was illegal because the grand jury which found the murder indictment in the first degree had no jurisdiction to find such an indictment, as the evidence submitted was insufficient, showing neither reasonable nor probable cause that the defendant had committed any felonious homicide; that it was believed that the only evidence submitted to the grand jury was the transcript of testimony given before the coroner's jury, plus the oral evidence of Sheriff Transou Scott and Stewart Warnken, Reynolds estate manager."

The arrival of Holman here resulted in an about-face in his attitude toward the surrender of Libby. In Cincinnati he had declared that he would not disclose the whereabouts of his daughter until she had recovered her health.

But after the lawyer-father of the missing defendant conferred with Solicitor Carlisle Higgins, who declined to discuss the matter of bail with his visitor, Holman asserted that he wished to co-operate with officials.

He declared that he had no intention to defy the laws of North Carolina and pointed out that if he had he would not have come within the state jurisdiction by coming to Winston-Salem. He said:

"I want to have the trial of my daughter as soon as possible. I am confident, of course, that she will be completely exonerated of the charges against her.

"The desire for a speedy trial and the added natural desire to save my daughter from all needed inconvenience before the trial were the main reasons for my coming here."

Holman declined to discuss whether or not his daughter had filed claim yet to the estate of her young husband.

He said it was a private matter and did not care to comment upon it. Recently Libby asked W. N. Reynolds, uncle of the dead youth, to act as executor of the estate. The uncle did not accept the position.

The 30-day period permitted the widow under state law in which to ask for letters of administration expires today.

If an application is not made a citation will be issued from the office of the clerk of Superior Court, allowing 20 additional days.

Far into the night, Holman talked with lawyers over the campaign to be used in an attempt to secure freedom for his daughter.

Plans were discussed as to how her health could be protected in the event of such a surrender. The possibilities of authorities permitting Libby to be guarded in a local hospital were considered.

The father declared that Libby was definitely expecting to become a mother. She had testified to this effect before the coroner's jury which returned a verdict that Smith Reynolds had come to his end at the hands of a person or persons unknown.

DICK REYNOLDS BLAMES MONEY

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 6.—(Universal.)—Too much money was probably too much for Smith Reynolds, his elder brother, Richard J. Reynolds, said as he boarded the liner American Legion for New York.

Reynolds, informed that Libby Holman, erstwhile torch singer and Smith's widow, and Ab Walker, Smith's friend, had been indicted on murder charges in connection with young Reynolds' mysterious death, said:

"Had Smith worked, he'd probably still be alive.

"Things were too easy for him. The zest of the struggle for existence was gone, and he had everything for the wishing.

"He would have made a fine navy officer. He possessed courage and he was interested in navigation and aviation."

Reynolds says that if he becomes convinced his brother was murdered, he will spend years trying to have the guilty brought to justice.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Every year it gets harder and harder and harder to tell the difference between a Republican and a Democrat.

Will Rogers

Outside of the looks their platforms and policies become more and more alike. But I believe I have found out the sure way to tell one from another this year. It's just the way they talk. The Republican says, "Well, things could have been worse," and the Democrat says, "How?"

VOLPE INQUEST WAITS GUN TEST

James Davidson, ballistics expert of the Coroner's office, today was to continue tests of the guns found in the automobile of the slayers of John, James and Arthur Volpe, slain in their Wylie avenue headquarters. So far the tests have shown James and Arthur were killed by bullets fired from two of the six guns found in the abandoned automobile.

Coroner W. J. McGregor is expected to announce the date of the inquest as soon as Davidson has submitted a report.

Two men detained by county detectives were released yesterday when employes of a Mt. Oliver motor company announced they were not the men who bought a second-hand car for which license plates found on the murder car had been issued.

Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the homicide squad, who yesterday ordered employes of the Highways and Sewers Department to clean the sewer at Wylie avenue and Tunnel street, announced no guns had been found.

Boy 'Volpes' Must Cease Attacks

Boys who called themselves "the Volpe gang," and who terrorized the Roosevelt School playground, Greenfield avenue and Loretta street, have decided against putting any more boys "on the spot," according to Lieut. John Showalter.

Showalter investigated after a mother told police of daily beatings received by her son at the hands of the gang.

Boys disliked by the conspirators were taken to a vacant garage near the playground and tickled. If they laughed, they were beaten with belts.

Most of the boys took to their heels when Showalter, a giant in stature, investigated. The boys were warned against the abuse.

NEEDY WOMAN 'TAKES BLAME' FOR FATHER

With $2 Weekly for Food, Man Raises Order; Jailed

A needy mother and her four small children prepared today to plead for the freedom of her father, Leopold Rivinski, 50, who was jailed for raising $2 charity food orders to $7 one to keep them from starving.

Rivinski, who has 16 grandchildren, was remanded to jail for five days by Magistrate J. J. O'Connor in Penn Avenue Police court to permit welfare workers to investigate his testimony that he forged the order to keep his grandchildren from starvation. He lives at 3406 Ligonier street.

HER HUSBAND JOBLESS

Charity gave Rivinski $2 weekly for himself and his wife. There was little left of this amount with which to answer the distress plea of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Gudak, of Verona street, Glassport, whose husband could not find work.

So Rivinski raised his $2 order to $7 and there was food for all. But the difference was noted and the police arrested Rivinski. Of his arrest his wife, Mary, said:

"When I saw him bringing so much food home I asked him how he got it and he told me. I made him stop it and he did, but it was too late. He is an honest man, and he wouldn't have done it if his grandchildren hadn't needed the food."

WILL "TAKE BLAME"

When Mrs. Gudak learned of his arrest, she said:

"I feel that it was my fault. I worried him when I wrote him that I just had to have some assistance, and I guess he did that for me. I will talk to the judge and take the blame."

Rivinski will receive a further hearing Monday morning. Magistrate O'Connor said yesterday he did not wish to dispose finally of the case before the circumstances were thoroughly investigated.

The magistrate said he had been told by a welfare worker that on a previous occasion Rivinski had returned a food order because it called for more than had been allotted to him.

The Honolulu Serenaders, under the direction of Henry Stoiber, shift from their regular 11:15 spot on WJAS to 11:30 tonight, in order to permit Pittsburgh Olympic fans to hear Ted Husing's summary of the day's events.

George E. Clarkson, manager of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council, is guest speaker on the Pittsburgh Motor Club program on WCAE today at 5:45. His subject is "Automobile Accidents in the News."

"Little Cyclone," a three-act comedy, is the First Nighter presentation on KDKA at 9:30.

The works of several outstanding American composers, including Henry Hadley, Edward MacDowell, Victor Herbert and Mayhew Lake, comprise the Goldman Band program on WCAE at 9. Edwin Franko Goldman's own grand march, "University," opens the concert.

"Henrietta and Dorothy," a new harmony team of Squirrel Hill songsters, make their debut on WWSW at 9:45.

Fan Fare

Several Columbia singers, including Helen Carlile and the Four Eton Boys, made their debuts as radio speakers when Jay Flippen called them to the microphone, engaged them in conversation and "gagged" at their expense . . . The piping voice of an old woman was heard recently during a Melodeers program. Investigation proved that is owned by Claude Reese, second tenor of the quartet. When he isn't busy in the studios, Reese makes the synchronization for Bimbo, who is seen in animated cartoons opposite Betty Boop. He's also responsible for the high-pitched tones of Koko, the character who springs from Max Feischer's ink-bottle.

Miss Nugent

Norman Brokenshire, Morton Downey, Jacques Renard and his orchestra and the Four Eton Boys are starred in the first of a new series of movie shorts.

Alma Kitchell, NBC contralto, commutes by automobile weekly between her summer home at Lake St. Catherine, Vt., and New York. Her routine in the country, she says, is taking care of her husband and two sons, playing 36 holes of golf and swimming.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Events

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

The social world is all agog today, and there's no reason to keep you guessing what about, as everyone knows Jane Allderdice's wedding takes place today in the home of her parents, the Taylor Allderdices, Jane becomes the bride of Willis McCook Reed, son of the W. Edgar Reeds, with the Rev. Dr. Edward S. Travers, of St. Louis, her brother-in-law, officiating. The home is decorated with spring flowers and ferns.

An embankment of English ivy formed the setting for the ceremony with white tapers in massive old Italian candelabra lighting the scene.

No bride of the season is lovelier. Jane is wearing white satin, with the bodice and long sleeves of lace, embroidered with pearls at the waist and hem of the oblong train. Her veil is of pointe applique lace, with a lace cap caught with orange blossoms. She is carrying a white silk prayer book with a marker of gardenias, spray orchids and lilies of the valley.

Louise Reed and the bride's sister, Mrs. Leonard S. Mudge, her only attendants, are wearing similar gowns of blue crepe, having cape sleeves, with which they are wearing hats of natural straw banded with a blue velvet ribbon. They are carrying blue delphinium and Cordez roses.

Gowns of Blue Crepe

George L. McCook is his nephew's best man. There is a small reception and dinner for the families and bridal party. The Reeds are leaving on a motor and fishing trip after which they'll be at home here.

And another bride of today is Mary Janice Piekarski, daughter of the Frank A. Piekarskis, of Beechwood boulevard, who, this morning, became the bride of Blair Frederic Gunther, son of Mrs. F. F. Gunther, of Erie, Pa. The ceremony took place at 10 o'clock in St. Adalbert's Church, with Msgr. John Gorcynski officiating, assisted by the Rev. Frank Benevantano. The altar was banked with ferns, palms and spring flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown, having the puffed sleeves and bodice of Duchess lace, forming points to below the hips, where the satin skirt extended into a circular court train. Her veil of tulle cascaded from a cap of lace and had a full length panel of rose point lace. She carried bouvardia, lilies of the valley and butterfly roses.

Maxine Piekarski, her sister's maid of honor, wore pale blue crepe having a jacket with elbow sleeves, and a shell pink straw picture hat. She carried pink roses and blue delphinium. Another sister, Irene Piekarski, and Martha Beck, as bridesmaids, wore shell pink chiffon and satin with turbans of matching chiffon. They carried pink roses and small thistles.

The mother of the bride wore brown chiffon, having a brown and white printed bodice, a large brown horsehair braid hat and a corsage of orchids.

John Matejczyk served as best man and ushers included Philip and Joseph Kortz.

After the reception and breakfast in the bride's home, Mr. Gunther and his bride left by motor for New York, and will take a boat trip to Maine. They will be at home in Beechwood boulevard in about three weeks. Mrs. Gunther attended the Winchester School for Girls.

Brookside Woman's Club Adopts 'Labor Plan' To Aid Needy

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Would you like some nice fresh vegetables, some hollyhock plants, or some homemade cakes, pies, tarts or cookies? Perhaps you are in need of a well knit sweater, or do your desires run to tutoring or tree spraying? Whatever they are, you may have them gratified by the Brookside Woman's Club.

This busy little neighborhood club, which was organized as a social and literary group, has gone philanthropic in a big way and has introduced a "four-hour labor plan." Under it, each member of the club has pledged herself to give at least four hours of paid "labor," choosing what form it may take. The proceeds will go to the local welfare work to be undertaken next winter.

Means Varied

The ways of raising the money have been widely varied and have run all the way from making especially fine pies, cakes, fudge, noodles, tea cakes, whole wheat bread, hot rolls, tarts, mayonnaise and other good things to the very unusual woman's work of tree-spraying. Some of the members have sold plants and flower seeds, others have marketed their own-grown vegetables, one has arranged flowers, another has rented out her new books, still another has offered her services for tutoring and child care, another gives lessons in voice and sewing and mending are done by others. A musicale was given at which $40 was raised and a gypsy fortune telling tea was another means of helping along the good work.

Last year the club assisted at the soup kitchen conducted at Bethel High School, and contributions of food and money, as well as individual assistance, were sent to miners' families at Coverdale. A great deal of sewing was accomplished, chiefly layettes for needy families, and there were other charitable activities which have earned distinction for the Brookside Club.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Should Girls Help Mother With Work?

'Should Peggy Ann be expected to ready up the house and do all the family chores—after working downtown all day?

And is she "lazy" if she objects to doing it?

According to mamma, she should, and she is. And even the fact that Peggy pays board doesn't soften her determination in the least. So every evening, when poor Peg would like to rest her weary bones on the Chesterfield, and every Saturday, when she'd like to go to a show or play a little tennis, it's the same story.

"You're very thoughtless of your poor mother!" mama wails, waving a dust cloth.

GIRL PUZZLED

Is it any more fair to expect Peggy to "keep house" after her day's work is done than it would be to expect papa to?

DEAR SALLY:

Maybe my question isn't really a vital one, but I would like to know whether you think a girl who works eight hours a day, and pays a liberal board at home should be expected to spend all her off hours cleaning a house or helping to get dinner?

I make my own bed and clean my own room, as well as doing the dishes, and I think that is fair enough. But darn it! When I come home tired, especially on Saturday afternoons, I don't feel up to doing a lot of housework! But, if I am tired and want to rest, or if I feel good and want to get outdoors and play tennis or go to a show, I am called "selfish" and "lazy" and "thoughtless of your mother, who slaves so hard all day."

WRONG ATTITUDE

Mother, however, is well, and not very old. She lies down every afternoon, and though I wouldn't go so far as to say she doesn't work hard, I do know that a great deal of her time mornings is spent talking over the back fence to the neighbors.

But her attitude is that I spend all day at the office doing nothing, and I am paid for it generously. Therefore, am I not the "rich daughter" with nothing to spend but time and money on herself (something mother has never known in her life)? And shouldn't I spend my extra time making it "easier for someone older than I?"

If I dare to sit idle for a minute, mother scurries around the kitchen with a great deal of energy, clattering pots and pans, closing cupboard doors, all the while glaring reproachfully at me.

Don't mistake me, she is no tyrant. She is only a little woman who has no idea what goes on in an office, and thinks I am still "her little girl" who should "come in from play and dust the furniture."

But what am I going to do about it?

PEGGY ANN.

What'll you do?

EXPRESS YOUR FEELINGS

Stick up for yourself, youngster. Tell mamma kindly but firmly that you are just as tired as she is; that you pay for your board, and if you paid for it away from home you would have all your time for yourself—and that if any other girl came into your home and paid board, she wouldn't dream of making her do the housework.

You are not "mother's little girl." You are a person in your own right, earning your own living, and you are entitled at least to the same consideration she would show a stranger.

Then stick to it, don't let her nag you.

And as for mamma's big bleat over her own chores—just why shouldn't she do some chores? Why should it be any more of a tragedy for a healthy mother to work and pay her way through life, than it is for any other woman? As a matter of fact, your mother has no more right to expect you to help her in the home than you have to expect her to help you in the office.

So add that to your argument, little sister. And if she has another tantrum? Well, what of it?

That's my answer to Peggy.

Maybe you won't agree with it. Maybe you think that because she is a girl it is up to her to help mamma, even if she is paying her way.

Do you? Or don't you?

Let's have your answer.

BEACH CLOTHES CREATE OWN REALM IN WORLD OF FASHION

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 6. — Beach clothes, as far as France is concerned, have become a fashion world in themselves. With the growth of popularity of outdoor life in France, French women—and in turn, their dressmakers—have taken up a whole new type of clothes designed especially for the beach and not in any way to be confused with what have always been called the costumes pour le sport.

* * *

BEACH DRESS, beach hats, beach coats and shoes are never designed by the French as costumes for sportswomen. They are to be worn for the special kind of life that avoids all the stiffness and formality of town clothes, and are planned to give women the most possible freedom of movement without resorting to masculine lines.

* * *

THERE IS every evidence of feminity in Mainbocher's beach dress, for example—the dotted frock pictured. It has many of the features of an afternoon or dinner frock—long full skirt, shoulder-cap sleeves and low neckline—yet its linen fabric and its cleverly devised closing makes it perfectly suited for the beach or the country. The separate skirt buttons at the side front over a vestee of white silk, while the jacket crosses its belt at the front, then is buttoned at the back.

* * *

THE LITTLE cloche, also of the dotted linen, has a soft drooping brim—a feature which makes it both easy to launder, and to pack without mussing.

* * *

PAUVETY'S two-piece frock, at the left, is one of those designed for cooler days in the country or on the beach, and is made of flannel. Its cowl-neck jumper blouse is worn over a blue-and-white striped cotton sweater, modeled after the French navy issue sweater. The cowl neck may be worn loose or pinned flat with two anchor clips.

Contract Bridge -:- -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

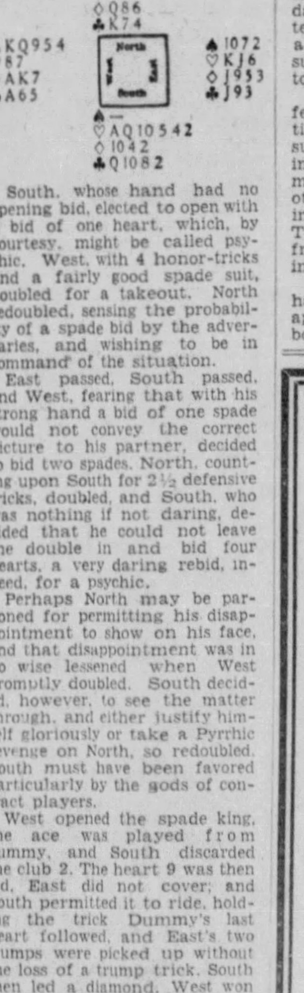
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Taking Out a Penalty Double

After you have made a bid and partner has doubled a suit adversely bid, for penalties, the double, as a rule, should be left in, unless your hand is of such a nature that you believe the double would be unprofitable. For instance, assume that your bid has been made without the necessary 2½ defensive tricks guaranteed by the opening bid. The situation is one that frequently recurs at the bridge table, and players often could become enmeshed in great difficulties because of the failure to properly grasp the principle underlying it.

If you have told your partner the whole truth about your hand, and he elects to double an adverse declaration, then he is in a better position to determine whether it is more profitable to play for game or part-score, and his judgment should be accepted. If, however, you have been venturing out into the field of psychic bidding, the situation in which you are placed is similar to what I recently observed in a rubber game at Crockford's Club in New York City.

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



South, whose hand had no opening bid, elected to open with a bid of one heart, which, by courtesy, might be called psychic. West, with 4 honor-tricks and a fairly good spade suit, doubled for a takeout. North redoubled, sensing the probability of a spade bid by the adversaries, and wishing to be in command of the situation.

East passed, South passed, and West, fearing that with his strong hand a bid of one spade would not convey the correct picture to his partner, decided to bid two spades. North, counting upon South for 2½ defensive tricks, doubled, and South, who was nothing if not daring, decided that he could not leave the double in and bid four hearts, a very daring rebid, indeed, for a psychic.

Perhaps North may be pardoned for permitting his disappointment to show on his face, and that disappointment was in no wise lessened when West promptly doubled. South decided, however, to see the matter through, and either justify himself gloriously or take a Pyrrhic revenge on North, so redoubled. South must have been favored particularly by the gods of contract players.

West opened the spade king, the ace was played from dummy, and South discarded the club 2. The heart 9 was then led, East did not cover; and South permitted it to ride, holding the trick Dummy's last heart followed, and East's two trumps were picked up without the loss of a trump trick. South then led a diamond. West won with the king, and lost only two diamonds and one club in the play.

"Of course, the double was of no use to us, partner," South remarked.

"You are perfectly right," responded North, mollified at the unanticipated outcome of the hand.

But suppose things had gone a little differently?

TODAY'S QUESTION.

North is Dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	2◇	Pass
3◇	Pass	?

What should South bid, holding:

♠J4 ♡A108 ◇QJ754 ♣J62

Answer — Three no-trump. This answer is quite obvious. South's hand does not seem very likely to produce a game in diamonds, and the 9-trick game in no-trump should be preferred. South's hand contains a mild fit with North's spades, a heart stopper and a partial club stopper.

How to Keep Well

Skin Disorders Very Often Due to Carelessness

That a clean, clear and healthy skin is a valuable asset no one will question.

During the summer months skin disorders are more common than at any time of the year. The sweat glands are more active in hot weather and the skin is more liable to infection. Today I want to tell you about a few of the summer skin diseases and how to prevent them.

Dr. Copeland

Ringworm is a common infection of the skin that is particularly prevalent during the summer months. It is a highly infectious disease, easily transmitted from one person to another, and is usually contracted in bath houses, shower baths, Turkish baths, gymnasiums and from floors contaminated by infected individuals.

Ringworm usually affects the hands or the feet, but it may appear on other parts of the body. The involved area has patches of blisters which are red and angry-looking.

The disease is easily prevented by wearing shoes or slippers, and at a crowded beach it is a good plan to wear bathing shoes. This simple precaution will prevent much unnecessary suffering.

Most persons are negligent about their diet and manner of living during the summer months. Eating spoiled food, the incomplete chewing of food, excessive use of spices, or eating food difficult to digest frequently leads to another common skin condition known as "urticaria" or "hives."

"Impetigo contagiosa," not unlike ringworm of feet or hands, is another skin disorder commonly seen in summer. It usually afflicts children, and in adults it is known as "barber's itch."

This is an infectious disease that quickly spreads from one child to another. Yellowish patches of crusted sores appear on the face, and may spread to the chest and other parts of the body. The disease is rarely serious, and quickly responds to treatment when an antiseptic ointment is applied to the affected parts.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

In a Restaurant

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When dining with a gentleman, should the lady give her order to her escort, or direct to the waiter? I have seen it done both ways.

2—To whomever the lady gives her order, should she tell at that time everything she wants for the full course dinner; that is, say, cocktail, meat course, and dessert; or can she decide on dessert after the meat course?

3—If there is a choice of vegetables and salad, should she specify which she prefers at the time of giving the order?

4—Another thing, regarding name cards: Should a girl use Miss before her name (Miss Jane May Smith) or just Jane May Smith? BETTY.

1—One does, as you say, see this done in both ways, but not by women who have an intuitive sense of the gracious regard that they should give their hosts. The man, on this occasion, is the host, and just as in a home we would indicate a wish to our hostess (or to a host, if there were no hostess), instead of directly to the waitress, so in a restaurant, we would, or should, give our order to the host, so that he may relay it with his own order to the waitress or waiter. It is most important that girls realize this, for a well-bred man quite naturally resents a girl's disregard of this important amenity.

2—This depends on the custom of the restaurant. Usually we see that it is convenient to give the order up to the dessert, probably because our choice of dessert may be affected by our enjoyment of the courses before that.

3—Usually this is the convenient way to do, both for diner and waitress.

4—Always the girl should use the Miss on her cards, even if she is still in her 'teens.

Western Public Service Earns $200,000 In Half Year

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

WESTERN PUBLIC SERVICE Corporation earned more than $200,000 in the first half of 1932 after deducting depreciation, depletion and all other charges. This compares with only a nominal profit in the corresponding period of 1931.

The organization has just passed through its period of initial development. It was formed late in 1929 and a major part of the year following was consumed in initial construction work. Since that time efforts have been concentrated on the development of markets for natural gas.

The company delivers natural gas from Southwestern Wyoming, Northern Colorado and Eastern Utah to Salt Lake City, Ogden, Utah, and adjacent territory. At the time of its organization it acquired the gas distributing companies in Salt Lake City and Utah. It also distributes gas in other Utah communities and three Wyoming communities.

* * *

Development Period Always Is Costly

A PERIOD OF development in a new enterprise always is costly. Western Public had to develop its new-found natural gas fields, construct pipe lines to the consuming points and then change over its distributing system from manufactured gas to natural gas. An entirely new market for gas had to be developed with the smelters and other industries in this territory.

The first full year of operations as a complete producing, transporting and distributing gas unit was 1930, when the general business decline was well under way. In that year the net loss after all charges was $826,433. The business slump in Utah was made particularly acute by conditions affecting the copper smelters, but in spite of this, 1931 was ended with a net profit of $29,637.

* * *

Smelters Work At Low Rate

THE PROFIT of over $200,000 shown for the first half of 1932 in the face of an almost complete shut down of operations by smelters in the district indicates the extent of the company's progress. These earnings were equivalent to 10 cents a share on 2,000,000 shares of capital stock. The company has no preferred stock or direct funded debt, although subsidiary companies have bonds outstanding of about $1,900,000.

The future of the copper industry will have an important bearing on profits of Western Public Service since smelters constitute the principal consuming industry for natural gas in the territory.

The management is another important factor to be considered. The company was formed by George W. Crawford and men associated with him in Columbia Gas and Electric and Lone Star Gas. A major share of the stock is owned by Pittsburghers.

BUSINESS MAY JOIN STOCK COMEBACK

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The security markets have been striking up the band for a business comeback, and the next phase is to observe whether the business troops will fall into line. The upswing got under way with the blessings of important New York bankers, and of high placed officials in Washington.

Mr. Rukeyser

Unquestionably, Congress and the administration, irrespective of their wisdom as to technique, had the will to be bullish. President Hoover has not attempted to be neutral in act or thought in the price struggle, but has consistently tended to castigate the wicked bears.

Congress in the amendments to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, in the Glass alternative to the Goldsborough Bill which permitted issuance of a billion more in currency by the national banks, in the earlier Glass-Steagall Act, and in the provision authorizing the Federal Reserve banks to go into the retail business for six months and make loans to individuals and corporations was in a reflationary mood. Since February, the Federal Reserve System, in its open market policy, has been pursuing a deliberately counter-deflationary course.

These energies in the direction of arresting deflation have begun to work, especially since credit enlargement was synchronized with the development of some shortages resulting from ruthlessly cutting down production in many directions.

Numerous participants in the bullish push have joined the bandwagon and said that the turn has definitely come. The head of a great investment enterprise said that America might some time fall into decay, but not this time. Prices have stiffened because securities which had been sell hope are again reflecting a reviving will to believe in the ultimate recuperative power of American economic institutions.

The return of prosperity, however, will remain a mere prospect until there is clear evidence of a growing demand for labor. Frank A. Vanderlip was indefinitely astute when he remarked that prosperity consists of the full employment of labor at high effective wages.

STOCK LEADERS RISE ON FRESH BUYING

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—In one of the most active opening of the stock market of the year, the bull movement rolled merrily on today, but again encountered scattered profit-taking.

During the first half hour advances of 2 to 3 points were registered by American Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, Case and Eastman, and issues up a point or more included American Tobacco "B," American Water Work, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Johns Manville, United States Steel common and preferred and others. United States Steel and American Telephone yielded part of their gains.

Bullishness on America in Paris and London was still said to be persisting, which continued to spur Wall street traders to further speculation for the rise. The British pound sterling continued its decline, partly reflecting the transfer of British funds to this center. It was also rumored that some continental speculators were going short of sterling, while going long on dollar securities.

The week-end business and mercantile reviews said that the principal change in business had been in sentiment, with the rise in securities and a number of commodities tending to overcome excessive cautiousness. Evidences of actual expansion of business activity to date, however, were described by Business Week as slight, scattered and uncertain. Some important banking quarters suggested that bullish enthusiasm should be kept within reasonable bounds.

Sterling cables opened at $3.48½, off 1⅝ cents, a new low on the movement, and the French franc was again a shade lower, suggesting that continuance of the movement might shortly bring a flow of gold from Paris.

WOOL MARKET EXPANDING

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—L. U. Edgehill, vice president of Draper & Co., said the National Co-operative Wool Marketing Corporation had sold several million pounds of wool yesterday at a price of 35 to 37 cents a pound, clean basis. Sales of equal size were made Thursday, Edgehill said.

The buyers of the co-operative wool were not disclosed by Edgehill, who said they included some of the largest manufacturers in the country. Draper & Co. are selling agents for the co-operative.

Edgehill described the present wool market as "moving rapidly," the like of which the trade has not experienced since 1920.

CAR LOADINGS UP 9,557

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Loadings of revenue freight during the week ended July 30 totaled 510,687 cars, an increase of 9,557 cars over the previous week, but 251,131 cars below the like week in 1931, the American Railway Association reports.

Smaller Carryover Of Wheat Expected

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—For the first time in several years, government estimates of the end-of-the-season world's carry-over of wheat are expected to show a reduction.

It is likely these estimates will be issued next week, and friends of higher prices are hopeful the figures will provide substantial aid. Adding to the auspicious prospect is trade reckoning that world available supplies of wheat are now 50,000,000 bushels less than the total a year ago.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Little Things About Big People

James R. Quirk, the publisher and editor of Photoplay, who passed away the other day, was the sort of fellow who handed you the entire contents of his next issue—weeks before it was released, and let you print any amount of it—so you might have an easier time of it.

Virginia Bruce, J. Gilbert's next wife, is Virginia Briggs.

George Brent, listed as Ruth Chatterton's next legal mate, detests people who call him a second Gable, which he is.

Hope Hampton, the wife of Jules Brulatour, once salesgirl'd for a Philly store. That's where he met her—and fell madly in love with her. He rates a third of a cent on each kodak film sold.

Pola Negri's real first name is Appolinia.

Edgar Selwyn was on the gangplank of the ill-fated Titanic when a telegram called him back to Paris. He is the only producer on Broadway who ever apologized to critics for offering a poor show.

Ring W. Lardner's middle initial stands for Wilmer—and Anita Loos was born April 26, but she doesn't know what year.

Lady Cavendish, who was Adele Astaire, buys her hats in the children's department. She still wears petticoats.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is an expert fortune teller.

Robert Chandler painted the sky in the Grand Central Station and had such fun. He ignored the design, however, and put the Dipper here and the North Star there, instead of there and here.

Gus Edwards is always mentioned as the one who started this celebrity on the road to fame, but never has anyone discovered who gave Edwards his first juicy break.

Joe Weber, of Weber & Fields.

One of the few millionaires (or he was, that is), is Thayer, a former magician who quit the stage and went in for the manufacturing of practical joker outfits. He is responsible for the invention of most of those knick-knacks you see in the Broadway shops.

Francine Larrimore, the actress, and Frances Alda, the Metropolitan canary, have identical real names — Frances Adler.

Toscanini never conducts from a score because he is so near-sighted he couldn't see it. So he plays only what he knows from memory.

Helen Morgan was once discharged by Lew Leslie, the producer, during a rehearsal "because she couldn't walk gracefully."

Chic Sale, who wrote "The Specialist," the best-selling smoking-car booklet, was worried about it before he had it published. He tried it out on the chorines of the show in which he starred.

Harry K. Thaw, who once was the life of the party, has cut out his heavy spending in the late places and gives the money he used to spend going gay—to needy friends, who stuck when he was in trouble.

Mrs. Paul Whiteman is the one responsible for her husband's 100 pound shave in weight, but she can't make the trick work on herself.

Jerome Kern, the "Show Boat" composer, made $1,500,000 profit on his collection of rare books, which he bought for $250,000. And no matter what you've heard, he is America's ace composer.

Barclay Warburton, Jr.'s bathroom is papered with headlines to remind him of the bust he was when he tried editing a paper.

Mayor Walker savvies and speaks Yiddish fluently.

Although Clara Bow has been absent from the screen for a long spell, she still entices the heaviest fan mail.

Peggy Joyce's apartment never contains photos of males.

Lenore Ulric is said to be the only leading lady (beg poddin, star) who never had an understudy.

Ursula Parrott, author of "Ex-Wife," one of the saltier books, has relatives on a Boston society which suppresses such things.

Gilbert Gabriel, a New York dramatic critic, was once decorated by Venezuela. He was given the "Order of Bolivar" after reading proof on their Presidential propaganda.

Jetta Goudal, the movie star, is Julia Goudaket. And Mae Clark, who also clicked on the Coast, was born Mae Klotz.

Calvin Coolidge never lost a race for public office in his career, but his boy, John, lost every time he ran for office at Amherst.

Before Bobbe Arnst married Johnny Weissmuller, she always celebrated her birthday by inviting her boy friends to the party, usually held at a swanky hotel—and she paid the check.

George Bernard Shaw and Rudyard Kipling never sign their names to anything. They sign their initials, to fool autograph peddlers.

Arthur Brisbane shudders when he is called a journalist and always refers to himself as a reporter. Probably because a journalist was once defined as a guy who always wears a silk hat and no socks—who is always borrowing money from a newspaperman!

Highlights of Olympics Filmed

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Outstanding events in the Olympic games at Los Angeles are graphically pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Previous world records are shown falling right and left with the United States athletes far in the lead. First the pictures show the sensational victory of Bob Tisdall, the Irish giant, in the grueling 400-meter hurdles. This is followed by the brilliant performance of Duncan McNaughton, of Canada, winning the high jump. Babe Didrikson, of Dallas, the Texas athletic marvel, hurls the javelin for a new world mark of 143 feet 4 inches; and then Stella Walsh, some time of the United States and Poland, romps home in the women's 100-meter dash to equal her world mark. Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, of Ireland, is shown flinging the hammer for 176 feet 11 inches, to win this contest. Then comes the greatest thrill of all, the running of the 100-meter final for men, won by Eddie Tolan, of Michigan, by a fraction of an inch from Ralph Metcalf, of Marquette, both Negro flashes. There are scenes of the great crowds and a vivid description of the various contests by the Glob Trotter, as well as talks by the victors who tell of their achievements.

The current Hearst Metrotone News is showing on the screens of the Penn, Fulton and several neighborhood theaters.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for President, comes out flatly for beer in one of the strongest speeches on the prohibition question since his nomination.

Warner Setting Record With Jungle Film

Frank Buck's "Bring 'Em Back Alive," screen feature in the Warner, is setting an attendance record for the Fifth avenue cinema palace. It began its second week yesterday, having attracted big crowds in the first six days. The picture shows how a trapper for zoos and circuses captures ferocious jungle beasts, and its thrills are numerous, including fights between big cats and between a python and crocodile and between a tiger and the same serpent.

A Bride

Stanley Has Stanwyck, Brent

By EDWARD W. GOSS

"The Purchase Price," co-starring Barbara Stanwyck and George Brent on the Stanley screen, is none too high in entertainment merit.

Barbara is cast as a night-club entertainer, while George plays a Dakota farmer. This Dakota farmer is indeed a queer person. Although a young man apparently enjoying the best of health, he goes about with a very terrible expression of gloom. Maybe it's because the lad has a big mortgage plastered on the old farm. That shouldn't make him glum, for he has a beautiful and talented wife, the entertainer. And, anyhow, what's a farm without a mortgage?

Most people wouldn't expect a night club entertainer to marry a poor farmer, especially one whom she has never seen. She does it in this picture, though. The reason she does it is to escape the environment of night clubs. The picture doesn't show why the night life is detrimental to the welfare of the young lady. Of course, there's a racketeer with a great love for Barbara, the entertainer, but he is apparently a good egg and never does her any harm. Nevertheless, Barbara leaves her gay life to marry the farmer she has never seen.

Brent, the farmer, does not give the girl from the big city an opportunity to adjust herself to her new surroundings, and because she is a bit hesitant in returning his first evidence of love he becomes very much put out. He is a wooden man throughout the rest of the picture. His wife should give him a kick. Instead she is the perfect wife with only love in her heart and blisters on her hands. A wholesome and heady drought of Horatio Alger is injected into the picture when the neglected wife pays interest on the mortgage, thus preventing foreclosure. How she gets the money and how she wins the love of her husband is all told on the screen.

Warners Slice Wages Of Star Players

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Salary reductions for all stars and featured players not heretofore concerned in pay cuts will become effective at the Warner Brothers-First National motion picture studios August 15, Jack L. Warner, vice president of the studios, who made the announcement, did not make public the extent of the reductions. Salary cuts were recently ordered by other Hollywood studios, the reduction amounting from 15 to 45 per cent.

Among the higher salaried players who will be affected are Ruth Chatterton and William Powell, each of whom are reported to receive $7,500 weekly, and Barbara Stanwyck, reputedly a $5,000-a-week actress.

Olympic Records Are Concentrated Coast Sunshine

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Those Olympic records from Los Angeles are as correct as the California sunshine. It's always pre-war strength.

It is so exhilarating that it was packed into wine bricks.

Inhale a vestful of California climate. Your chest swells up, your shoulder blades open and close like Chinese fans and your vest buttons glow like lightning bugs.

Add chiropractics to that mixture and you have the native Californian with a red-tiled roof, an orange tree in his back yard and a gasoline pump on the front lawn.

Nobody starves in that fertile state for wheat will grow in the wrinkle of your neck.

That's where we intend to live some day where they even have wheel-chair races in the old folks home.

It's an athletic colony which takes its calisthenics seriously. Proof of that is that one little California handshake would have made Charles Evans Hughes president of all the other states.

BITS OF LIFE
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

A Story Just the Same

I WAS downtown on business the other afternoon, and dropped into a speako I used to frequent in the early days of my alleged newspaper career.

Eddie, the jovial bartender, was shining glasses when I entered. Time stood still, and my memory hurried back 10 years. I remembered the last night I was in this place of many laughs and good guys. Red Dolan, reporter extraordinary, and I said good-night to Eddie. He was shining glasses when we left. After 10 years I return—and it was just as though I had stepped out for a minute. Not a thing was changed. And Eddie was still polishing his glasses.

"How have yuh been, Mark?" asked mine host and old friend.

"Pretty good," I lied.

The years have been generous with Eddie. His hair is as black as it ever was, not a gray thread disturbing the sleekness of his carefully plastered shock. His pale blue eyes dance with the joy of living. Oh, well, he has always been an optimist.

I ordered my usual pony of ice cream soda.

"What are you having, Eddie?" I asked.

"I ain't drinkin', Mark," he answered.

I couldn't believe my ears. But on Broadway you can't believe your best friend. So I wasn't surprised much. But Eddie was famous among newspapermen for his benders. And many's the night he had journeyed uptown with me for a couple of ginger ales in the clubs to the north.

"I haven't seen you for 10 years, pal," I told him. "Have one with me for old time's sake."

Eddie shook his carefully combed head. Nothing doing. He was on the wagon. Hadn't touched a drop for five years. And wasn't going to touch it. He wasn't kidding.

"If you're seriously on the wagon, I'm sorry I offered you a drink," I murmured. "But what made you turn square?"

And there in the dim speak, between drinks for printers and reporters and truck drivers, Eddie told this amazing tale. I shall not attempt to desecrate his astonishing East Side twang by imitating it. It is a cross between Al Smith and George Jessel, if you get what I mean.

Well, here it is in Eddie's own language:

"I'm drinking for a week or two and wind up in a drum (ed. note: speakeasy) in Brooklyn owned by a pal of mine. This gent sells colored iodine. I ain't kidding. I hang around the joint for a couple of days with pink elephants and funny-looking monkeys who sing like Rudy Vallee. After a while my friend figures that friendship is a very beautiful thing but money is more important. Because if I hang around there any longer he will lose all his customers as I am making funny noises and comical expressions with my face.

"So he hailed a cab and poured me into it and told the driver to take me to New York—just on the other side of the bridge. But I ain't no sap. If he wants to get rid of me he has to make a settlement. And he does. He gives me ten bucks and a quart of the paint he sells for whisky.

"I remember taking a swig of the whisky as we bounce across the bridge—and then the lights go out. Black. I'm as unconscious as Congress. Or a cop after 12 o'clock.

"The driver, I learn later, gets afraid when I pass out. He tries to feel my pulse. There ain't any. He listens for my heart. Silence. He backs me into a drug store near the World Building.

"The clerk, a medical student, knows me. He, too, attempts to find life in me. N. G. He figures I'm dead. He calls a doctor, and someone rings in for an ambulance. The neighborhood doctor takes a gander at me and shakes his head. He says I'm dead. Along comes the ambulance. That croaker says I'm dead. That's two sawbones and a drug clerk says I'm dead.

"Well, I wake up, and I'm in a dark room. I try to move. I can't. I don't know what to do. I lay there for a couple of hours, maybe. But no dice. Finally I can move my finger. After a while I move my hand. I hold my hand up. I put it to my face. It's as black as Al Jolson during business hours.

"Whew! I was plenty afraid. I didn't know where I was—or what had happened. And after a while I discover I didn't have a stitch of clothing on me. That's great. And me in a strange place.

"I rolled off whatever I was laying on, and crashed to the floor. It was a metal table. I crawled along. And suddenly, when I noticed my roommate, I knew where I was. I was in the morgue. I almost died for fair then.

"I crawled to the door. I fell against it. It opened into a court yard. Gee, it was a pretty day. The sun was shining. The sky was blue and wonderful.

"I must have laid there for an hour. Black and bare and wondering what it was all about. Expecting to see St. Peter come along with his keys in his pocket.

"Well, finally a guy comes along. He's all dressed in white like a baker or a doctor. I try to yell for him. At first I make a noise like a radiator when the steam comes up. And then boom—I scream. Did you ever see an airplane take off? Well, that's how that guy took it on the lam. He musta went a couple of miles a minute.

"After a while he comes back with a million croakers. They drag me into a room and start to bundle me into blankets like a dead Indian. They work on me. I can't talk. And I figure I'm getting blacker by the minute.

"But there's one smart doctor in the mob. He says to get me a drink. They come back with a pint. And pretty soon I can talk. And after a while I begin getting white. But I don't crack until I have knocked off the pint.

"'Encore!' I yell. 'Encore!' So I have a couple more. And finally they tell me what a lucky guy I am. How I was figured for dead—and that I'm laying there for maybe a couple of hours."

Eddie was polishing glasses when he completed his tale.

"And the reason I'm not drinking," he says, "is because I'm a man of my word. Once I said that I loved likker so much I wouldn't stop drinking until I died. Well, two doctors, who should know, said I was dead. That was five years ago this month—and I haven't had a drink since."

Eddie wandered to the end of the bar to shake up a drink for a customer. A photographer I knew walked in.

"You haven't been in here in years, Mark," he said. "I remember how you and Eddie used to go out when he got through work. But he's been a different guy since he was married. He ain't touched a drop."

"How long has he been married?" I asked.

"Oh, it's five years this month," the photographer confided.

I wonder if I was being kidded . . .

Vertical Life As Lived In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

The first thing you learn about the people in "Skyscraper Souls," the new film at the Penn Theater, is that apparently they haven't anything of the sort. Cheek takes its place. The second thing you learn is that they have an inevitable tendency to collide with one another. The picture opens with bumps and closes with bumps—in between the people step on one another's toes or run into one another's elbows. People in Faith Baldwin's skyscraper must be a mass of black and blue contusions. Anyway, the audience laughed every time, so Director Selwyn must think the end justifies the means.

George Seibel

To call it Faith Baldwin's skyscraper is not strictly correct—it belongs to Warren William. He's the new Hollywood idol, who looks something like John Barrymore and acts much better than Clark Gable. He owns the skyscraper, but has mortgaged his soul, if any, to acquire it. Anyway, they are going to foreclose; so he arranges a bank merger, sends the stock sky-scraping, then dumps it into the bargain basement.

In between he amicably writes out $100,000 checks for his wife, makes love to Maureen O'Sullivan, which is an easy job, and tries to get rid of Verree Teasdale, who shoots him for love and then plunges from the roof of the skyscraper, also for love. Finally, Norman Foster, who has been pursuing the coquettish Maureen with the ferocious impudence of Bill Haines, catches Maureen on the rebound and is happy with her on fifty bucks a week—how many weeks deponent saith not.

It's a long time since such lavish sums have been thrown about with such reckless abandon. There is plenty of money in circulation in that skyscraper. There is also good acting, in which Anita Page and George Barbier have a share. If only there weren't so many head-on and tangent collisions and a few more souls!

But then there's a Mickey Mouse comedy to re-establish our faith in human nature and the reasonableness of life. And a travel film of "Home Sweet Home" to make us yearn for a sampan or a jinrikisha. And glimpses of the Olympic Games which reassure us that the world is flat and all its people don't live in elevators.

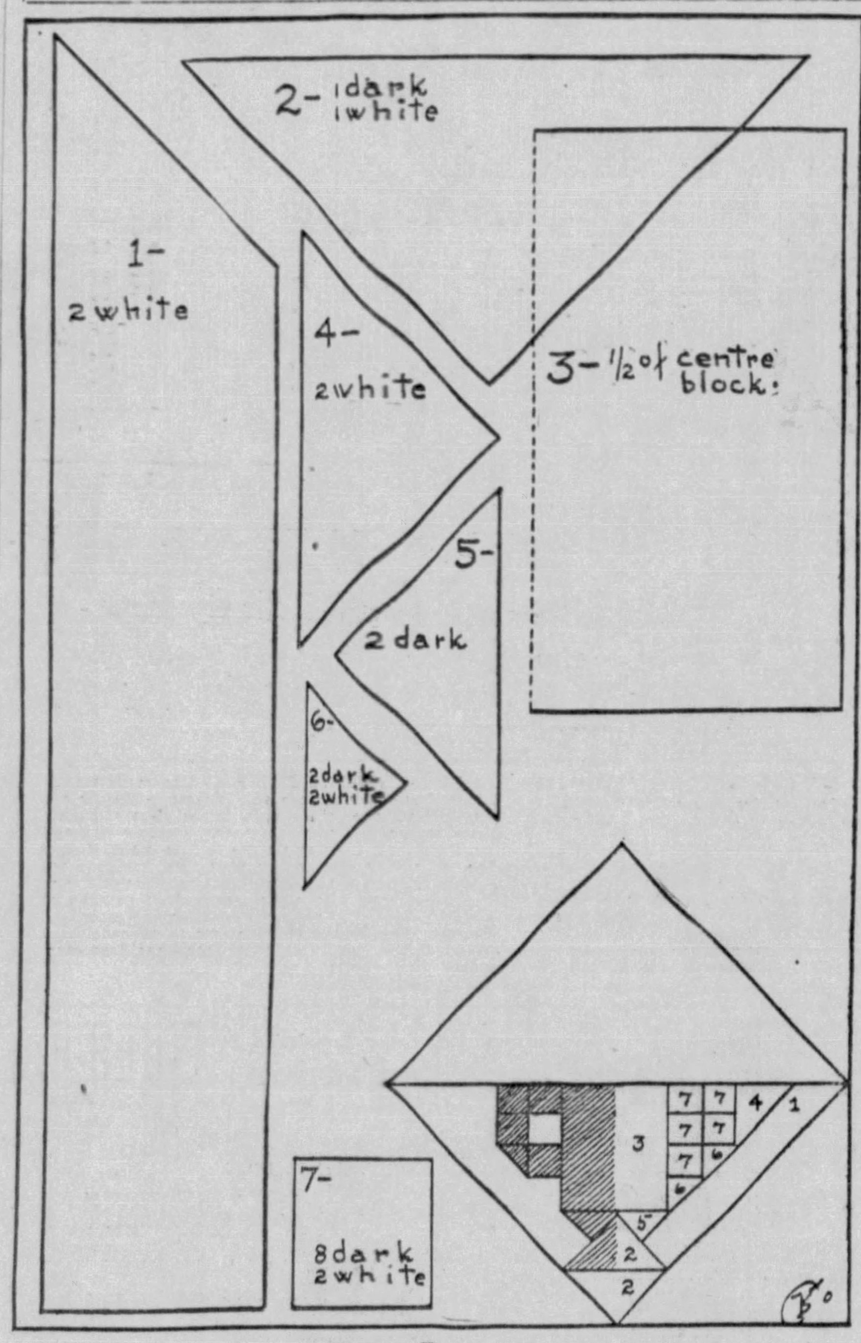
Nancy Page Quilt Club -:- -:- By Florence La Ganke



Urn Pattern

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Garden Bouquet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope to Nancy Page in care of this paper.

The second meeting of the Nancy Page Quilt Club was devoted to arithmetic and a study of the direction leaflet. By sending for this leaflet you too will get a diagram of the finished quilt and will understand how to put the blocks together.

There are border strips, small and large triangles that are a fourth and a half the size of large diamond blocks. These diamond blocks are cut or torn 12½ inches by 12½ inches. For them use soft white gingham. There are 12 of them. But club members prepared 18 more which were later cut into halves diagonally. These gave 36 large triangles. Two of these were cut into halves again diagonally, making four small triangles. These were corner pieces. The remaining large triangles were the pieces next to the border strips and the pieces on to which the birds and flowers were appliqued.

The finished quilt has 32 large diamond-shaped blocks. In 20 of these the lower half is made up of the pieced urn, as shown in today's paper. The upper half is the white triangle which is seamed to the pieced block. The combination of the two makes a diamond block which is the same size as the diamond block of solid white, of which there are 12. The border strips can wait a later description.

Now for the urn. Keep this pattern for you will need to use it 20 times. Nancy suggests pasting it into your Nancy Page Quilt Scrap Book after you have made a tracing of it on lightweight cardboard. This tracing is cut into pieces and these are used for patterns.

In using them, allow one-quarter inch on all sides for seaming. Note that the pieces are numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. These numbers correspond to placement of blocks in urn as shown in small drawing.

Note that only one-half of urn is shaded in that small drawing. This has been done to show how pieces are put together. The white urn, is of course, of one color with background of white.

Note that on each piece there is further printing telling how many pieces of each size to cut. Just because it says "dark" it is not necessary, nor wise, to choose dark color for urn. Pale yellow, ecru, tan or soft green are suggested. Choose color-fast, soft material like gingham.

Note that piece numbered 3 shows a dotted line. Lay this piece with the dotted line on a fold of the material, for only half of it is shown. This is because of lack of space in the drawing.

Use fine stitches and put the pieces together as indicated in small drawing. Then seam the large white triangle along upper edge. Now you are ready for first applique which appears next week and is a tulip.

BACK BLOCKS SUPPLIED

In the event you have missed any of the Garden Bouquet Quilt blocks previously published in this paper please send 10 cents for each block missing. Also enclose a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope. Address Nancy Page, care of this paper.

PITCHING RECORDS TELL TALE

PITTSBURGH WILL BE host within a few weeks at a national sports competition which will bring the leading lights of the pastime to this city. The event is the national fly-casting tournament, awarded to the Pittsburgh Casting Club. It will be staged on August 25, 26-27-28, with the distance, weight and plug events being cast on land on Schenley Oval and the bait and fly accuracy contests on the platform at Lake Carnegie in Highland Park. The distance fly-casting with 5¾-ounce rods and the distance salmon fly-casting with 15-foot rods also are scheduled for the lake. In fact, there will be all sorts of casting except that of aspersions.

CHARLES W. WARD is the president of the Pittsburgh Casting Club, and you will go far and wide before you will meet up with a more enthusiastic sponsor of any sport. The tournament will be held under the auspices of the National Association of Angling Clubs. A feature of the tournament will be demonstrations by experts for fishermen anxious to learn about the finer points of their sport. The leading casters do a remarkable job of casting for accuracy and distance, and the spectators at the events are in for a treat of skill.

C. W. WARD

AN ODD ANGLE is presented in the latest major league batting averages, including games up to last Wednesday. Jimmy Foxx, first baseman of the Athletics, leads the American League with an average of .359, and Don Hurst, of the Phillies, also a first baseman, tops his circuit with an identical figure. They play for teams in the same city. There's one for Ripley.

COMES A WORD of complaint from Emil M. Sherby, a North Side Pirate fan, who thinks the locals ought to shift their lineup to get more right hand batters into it when the rival managers are feeding them left hand pitching, and also that the Pirates should have at least three good southpaw pitchers of their own. Until the recent slump, the Pirates were doing very well with their own system. There is a good deal to be said about the practice of some managers in having one batting order against left hand pitching and another against right-handers, but all managers do not think along the same lines. The suggestion is something to think about, however.

CAN YOU IMAGINE how well Jock Sutherland, Pitt's football coach, is enjoying his football vacation to Scotland as he contemplates the task before him of replacing his entire line of last year for the toughest schedule in the history of the local institution, concluding with a duel against Pop Warner and his Stanford stars at the Stadium? The Pitt gridders will be assembled at Camp Hamilton the first week in September for two weeks of intensive pre-season work to condition them for the grind.

IT'S THE END of the good old summer time for Ollie Stiff and Walter Ridley, the Pitt Stadium ticket men. One hundred and seventy-five pounds of tickets have been delivered at the Stadium, and all they have to do is to separate them and take care of everybody at every game on the 50-yard line. If you don't get your tickets on the 50-yard line, don't say we didn't tip you off to the identity of the two gentlemen responsible. Address all complaints to them. They like to receive mail.

If you're really looking for the answer to the question of what is wrong with the Pirates that they have lost their last six games, after the great splurge that carried them to the top for a lead of five games, now cut to four games, just cast an orb or two in the direction of the pitching staff.

IT IS A fact that only two Pirate starting pitchers have finished the day's work in the 16 games played by the locals beginning with their last stand at home, against the Cubs, on July 23. They were Meine, in the sixth game of the New York series, and Swift in the first game at Philadelphia. Meine won his battle, 9-1, while Swift was beaten, 7-4.

THE PIRATES USED four pitchers, Swift, Brame, French and Harris, to beat the Cubs, 11-8, in winding up their stay at home. Meine and Brame lost, 7-2, to the Cubs in the first game of a doubleheader at Chicago, the next day, and Spencer and Harris had to be called upon to win the second one, 7-5.

FRENCH, CHAGNON AND Spencer were employed in losing the first game of the eastern trip to the Giants, 7-3. Then came the spurt of six straight victories over the Giants, with Brame relieving Chagnon and winning, 7-5; Harris, Spencer and French following Kremer to win, 9-8; Harris relieving Swift to win, 4-2; Brame and French following Swetonic to win, 10-7; Meine going the route, and Swetonic relieving Harris in a 4-3 game.

Going into Philadelphia, last Saturday, Swift lost the first game of a doubleheader, 7-4, and Spencer and Chagnon dropped the second, 13-3. On Monday, Meine, Brame, Spencer and Chagnon were battered for 23 hits in an 18-5 rout, while, on Tuesday, Harris and French pitched in the 11-6 defeat by the Phillies. The club was rained out on Wednesday, and Swetonic, French and Harris pitched in the 7-4 defeat in the first game of the doubleheader with Brooklyn, Thursday, while Kremer and Swift lost, 6-5, in 10 innings in the second game. The Bucs were idle yesterday.

THE ABOVE RECORDS indicate plainly that the basis of the Pirates' slump lies in the fact that the starting pitchers are not continuing their good work of a month ago, and the first string relief men also are not holding up their end. The club is making its share of runs—in fact, it has not made less than two per game, and that few only once, but the pitchers can't hold the leads. Whereas the Pirates, during their rise, were winning many close ones and coming from behind in the late innings to win, in their run of six straight defeats they have lost one game by one run, two by three runs, one by five runs, one by 10 runs and one by 13 runs. They have averaged two and one-half pitchers per game in their last 16 starts. Yes, sir, you need look no farther than the pitching records to discover the reason for the string of setbacks.

JIMMY M'LARNIN, fighting for the first time in a year, takes a bad beating from Lou Brouillard, just an ordinary fighter who held the welterweight title for a short time. Brouillard is a southpaw and a willing mixer, and the critics say his style bothered McLarnin. The real reason for Jimmy's decisive defeat, however, undoubtedly was his long layoff. No boxer can remain out of the ring that long and expect to be able to do himself justice against top flight opposition. Jimmy always has been a fighter who boxed seldom, picking his spots for the big money. This time he loafed too long and paid the penalty.

YANKEE VICTIM OF UNETHICAL 'CUTTING'

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—On a day that calls for a big hand for a great little guy, Bill Carr, for his marvelous 400-meter triumph yesterday over Ben Eastman in 46.2 seconds, the Olympic Games were rocked today by reverberations of the greatest upheaval since the battle of 1908.

The central figure of the controversy was Lauri Lehtinen, Finland's greatest young runner and disputed winner of the 5,000-meter final. Ralph Hill, an American boy, came within three inches of defeating Lehtinen and shutting out the Finns completely in the Olympic long distance "flat" races.

The cause of the dissension was Lehtinen's interference with Hill in an extraordinary stretch duel during which the Finn three times crossed his American rival in clear violation of rules as well as ethics in an international meet upholding the highest ideals of sportsmanship.

BITTERNESS AROUSED

The effect was to stir up a fresh aftermath of bitterness, ill-feeling and partisanship today, with the end of the track and field championships in sight and Finland, once more, the storm center, only a week after the banishment of Paavo Nurmi from the games on charges of professionalism.

Officially it will stand, with Lehtinen getting the gold medal and Hill sharing with him the new Olympic record of 14:30, because the two were so close together that the watches at the finish showed no difference in time.

The Americans refused to make a formal protest, although the national president of the Amateur Athletic Union, Avery Brundage, of Chicago, made no attempt to conceal his displeasure and made a public statement, saying:

"Although the A. A. U. considers the race was not fairly run, neither Mr. Hill nor the United States will protest."

Lehtinen and other Finns insisted no interference was attempted.

CROWD IN UPROAR

Even Hill, reluctant to enter into any discussion at all, asserted his belief his rival did not "mean" to interfere. Gustavus T. Kirby, American chief judge at the finish and close observer of the disputed incidents, declared:

"If it had been a college meet, I would not have hesitated to disqualify Lehtinen on the spot."

It was more than an hour after the finish, marked by an unprecedented demonstration of booing by the crowd of 60,000, that Lehtinen formally was declared the winner by Referee Arthur Holz, of Germany.

The whole story of the 5,000-meter final was in the last 100 meters. Up to then, as well as right down to the finish Hill, the tall Oregon boy, stuck like glue to

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: BUNNY AUSTIN—For the first time in 13 years, an Englishman reached the final round in the All-Comers' Singles at Wimbledon, England, when H. W. (Bunny) Austin faced the American ace, Ellsworth Vines, July 2, to whose crushing attack he bowed, 6-4, 6-3, 6-0. In 1919, A. R. Kingscote, popular English World War veteran, reached the finals and was defeated by G. L. Patterson. The English lack of success in contending for their own coveted All-Comers' Singles crown in the last score years is strangely paradoxical. It has not been held by an Englishman since A. W. Gore defeated the Frenchman, A. H. Gobert, in 1912. A GHASTLY FUNERAL—The mountainous region of Zicavo, Corsica, is so rough and impassable that, in order to convey the dead body of a villager to the place of burial, a method has to be resorted to which probably is unique in ghastliness. The corpse, dressed in an ample goatskin, is mounted upon a horse. The seat of the dead rider is quite rigid, the body being held in position by cord and pieces of wood, while the chin is held upright by a forked twig fixed to the saddle. It is an extraordinary and fantastic sight, but most interesting is the mount's reaction to the task. The horse is so frightened at its load that it is useless for any further employment. No horse has been known to carry a dead rider a second time.

TOMORROW—THE SEA SHELL MOUNTAINS.

LT. MAYO HOLDS SMALL LEAD

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Lieut. Richard Mayo, the United States' surprise contender for the modern pentathlon honors of the Olympics, maintained his lead yesterday, but three Swedish competitors were within striking distance after the fourth event, the 300-meter free style swim.

The young field artillery officer from Fort Still, Okla., finished fourteenth in the swim. With his poorest event remaining today, the 4000-meter cross country run, Mayo held a 21½ point total. This was a scant three and one-half points ahead of Count Johan Oxenstierna, Sweden, and only four points in front of Sven Thofelt, Sweden, 1928 champion, who finished with 25 and 25½ points respectively.

SHACOSKI WINS GOLF TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

Alexander Shacoski, a youngster from Coraopolis, won the North Park golf championship yesterday, defeating the veteran Bernie McFarland, former city champion, 5 and 4. To beat the man who had worked on a railroad engine all the previous night, Shacoski had to shoot par golf, in fact, the winner set a new course record on the morning round.

On the fifteenth hole in the morning, Shacoski had Bernie 5 down, but brilliant playing by the veteran won the last three holes. Shacoski turned in a 72 and McFarland a 74. The previous course record was 73, shot by Carl Kauffman, the city champion.

The first nine of the second round spelled defeat for McFarland. He won the first hole when Shacoski put his ball out of bounds, but from that on Shacoski gave a brilliant exhibition of iron play.

He was one over par at the turn with 27 holes played, 4 up. The match finished in the fourteenth green.

In a mixed foursome event at Montour Heights yesterday, Mrs. M. K. Farber and P. W. Gundelfinger topped the field with a card of 81-7—74. Gundlefinger tied the Montour course record of 70. The low net was scored by Mr. and Mrs J. M. McDonald with 102-30—72.

Walter Simpson, Washington caddie, set a new record at Namacolin yesterday when he turned in a 32 for a par 35 nine-hole course.

TIGER HURLER MISSES FAME

Credit young Tom Davis Bridges, of Detroit, with the best pitched game of the major league season.

The 25-year-old right hander, who learned his baseball at the University of Tennessee, pitched the Tigers to a 13-to-0 victory over the Washington Senators yesterday, allowing only one hit and facing only 28 batsmen.

The Tiger star retired the first 26 Senators to face him only to have Pinch Hitter Dave Harris break the spell with two out in the ninth After Harris had cracked the first ball into left field for a clean single, ruining Bridges' chance at a no-hit game, Sam Rice was retired for the final out on a bounder to first base.

It was the second one-hit game of the year in the majors and the second by a Detroit pitcher. Earl Whitehill, veteran southpaw, gave the St. Louis Browns only one hit on July 4 but walked two men. Bridges walked no one and fanned seven.

The Cleveland Indians pulled closer to second place by outpointing the Boston Red Sox, 7-2 while the Philadelphia Athletics were dropping a 10-inning 9-to-8 decision to the Browns. The Yankees were held idle by rain at Chicago.

In the National League, Bill Walker came close to duplicating Bridges' performance as the New York Giants trounced the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-2. Walker gave up only two hits, both of them home runs by Ray Blades and Jimmy Wilson.

The rampant Phillies blasted Root, May and Smith for 15 hits and handed the Chicago Cubs a 9-2 beating.

Red Lucas pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-to-2 verdict over the Boston Braves.

PIRATES CLOSE SERIES WITH DODGERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Refreshed by a day of rest, the Pirates this morning were eager for more diamond action. The league leaders are due to wind up their series with the Dodgers this afternoon at Ebbets Field. A single game is carded.

Either Heinie Meine or Larry French will face the Carey clan in the farewell setto. Dazzy Vance is expected to twirl for the Brooklyn team. Floyd Vaughan is slated to return to the shortfield position in the Pirate lineup, as the youngster has recovered from his slight attack of ptomaine poisoning.

VANCE NO SCARE

Not even Vance can dull the fervor of the Pittsburgh troupe with regard to the winning of a game today. In their worst slump since they became flag contenders, the league leaders have dropped their last six contests.

The Pirates see the colors in the rainbow in the luck that has remained with them as they dropped six in succession. They were four full games ahead of the Cubs this morning despite their long string of reverses. In other words, the Rovers have lost but one half of a full game in ground since they left Pittsburgh almost two weeks ago.

George Gibson will lead his club to Boston after finishing up with the Dodgers today. The Buccos are scheduled for two contests with the Braves tomorrow. Another doubleheader is slated for Wednesday, with a single game intervening. The Pittsburghers will hurry back to Pittsburgh after the dual bill of Wednesday, for they must be at Forbes Field on Thursday afternoon to take on the Cubs.

PHILS CLOSE RIVALS

The Pirates today did not know whether they should thank the Phillies for a little lift. The Quakers smeared the Bruins yesterday, the Chicago setback dropping them a bit further below the Pirates, but the Phillies, on the other hand, are within five games of the leaders, and in view of the treatment accorded the Pirates while they were in Quakertown they can hardly be blamed for looking upon the encroaching Phils with a certain amount of fear.

The Buccos, however, are confident they will be able to stop the skidding soon. Perhaps they had a slump coming. Few people picked them to get to the top, but they fooled the critics and the fans. And they are apt to get back into a winning stride before many days have passed.

Crawfords, Yankees Play Twin Bill

The Pittsburgh Crawfords and the New York Black Yankees meet in a doubleheader at Greenlee Field this afternoon, the first game being carded for 4 p. m. The clubs played a 3-3 tie last evening.

In the City League, Dormont knocked off the Geislers, 14 to 7, and Homewood trimmed Reliance Life, 5 to 4. The Scott Morgans took a fall out of the ambitious Bellevue nine in the County League, 7 to 3, practically clinching the circuit title.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—I said to Griff today:

"The depression is over. Things are on the up-grade."

Griff said:

"Yeah?"

I said:

"Yeah. Business is better and credit is easier."

Griff said:

"If you think so, just try and borrow 10 bucks from me."

Nick Altrock

I said:

"Confidence has been restored everywhere."

Griff said:

"Not here. I still lack confidence in a pitcher that walks the first three men."

I said:

"The unemployment situation has improved."

Griff said:

"Not with my club, bo. I still got 14 guys loafing on my payroll while the other nine of 'em are in there playing ball."

I said:

"By fall the country will be standing on its own feet."

Griff said:

"That's fine. It's certainly been treading on MY feet long enough."

I said:

"Prosperity will soon be completely here."

Griff said:

"Cut it out, Nick. By Christmas you'll be trying to prove that Santa Claus is twins."

CARR DUBBED GREATEST QUARTER-MILER IN HISTORY

EASTMAN WINS PRAISES OF ROBERTSON

By LAWSON ROBERTSON,
Head Coach American Olympic Team.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 6.—My sincerest hope is that the athletic world now will acknowledge little Bill Carr as perhaps the greatest quarter miler of all time.

This, I am afraid, they were somewhat reluctant to do until yesterday afternoon when Bill met the best 400-meter men the entire globe could produce. Whipped them without chance for alibi on the part of any—and did it in faster time than any human that ever lived.

Since I have been on the Pacific Coast I have been in a rather awkward position concerning Carr. My regular job is coach of track and field at Penn, and Carr is my pupil. He showed me last year that he had spectacular ability and he rounded into such fine form this spring that he impressed me as being without a peer.

NEVER GOT CREDIT

When Carr won from the mighty Ben Eastman in the Intercollegiates at Berkeley, many decided it must have been a fluke. Little Bill never was given the full glory for accomplishing so wonderful a task as defeating Eastman, whose brilliance had dazzled the continent. When Carr repeated in the Olympic tryout finals, winning by a comfortable margin, Bill still was denied the fame to which he was entitled because many felt that Ben was stale going into that race.

Afterward all the men elected for our Olympic team were turned over to me. Eastman then became to me just what Carr had been at Penn, one of the boys. He was on my squad and it was up to me to get him right for yesterday's race.

One must know Eastman real to appreciate him. He is a fine, mannerly and extremely modest chap. He is as game as they come and as fast as lightning. He never asks a single favor for himself and he would run a dozen races a day, if it obliged anybody.

NEW WORLD MARK

The answer as to whether Eastman was right is shown by the fact he ran in 46 4-10 seconds which equals the best time he ever made in his life. Yet it was not quite good enough to win, because Bill stepped it in 46 2-10, a new world record, which should endure for a long, long time and which performance, I hope, will cause those who are sportsmen to acknowledge Carr as great, and acclaim him the real champion that he is.

It was most unfortunate for the spirit of the Olympics that the 5,000 meters final should bring about a situation where there was, for so long a time, a question as to whether or not Lehtinen, the winner from Finland, should be disqualified in favor of Ralph Hill, of Oregon.

Hill ran a great race—so did Lehtinen. The latter alternated in the lead with a Finnish stablemate for almost 4,000 meters and then Hill, running up gradually, split the pair of them. And soon the contest was a two-man affair.

HILL CLOSES IN

As they swung for the first of the two final turns, it was Lethinen by a yard, with Hill right back of him.

Turning into the stretch, Hill started to move up fast. Then, as it appeared to the crowd, Lehtinen moved out from the rail and his act seemed to block off the charge of Hill. The latter had to shorten stride and lost at least two yards. Yet Hill was game enough and had sufficient left to charge after Lethinen, having no cross over to the rail to get room, and to many it looked like a dead heat.

The time was 14 minutes and 30 seconds, a new world record for the distance and it is too bad that victory should have been marred by anything that struck the crowd as being even slightly in opposition to the true Olympic spirit.

Olympic Briefs

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Wielding a blade lightning swift but striking often in the same place, Gustavo Hafzi, Italian student who has been fencing 12 of his 23 years, yesterday won the individual foils championship of the Olympic Games.

Teams went at once into the epee or dueling sword contests, Canada being the only country eliminated from a field of nine in the opening bouts.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The United States took the major share of honors yesterday as eight days of Olympic yacht racing got under way. Yankee boatmen captured first places in the eight meter and star classes, Sweden annexed first in the six meters and Great Britain in the monotype.

Gilbert Gray, of New Orleans, skippering the Jupiter, vanquished a field of seven starters in the star boat class and was the outstanding performer of the day. His time was 2 hours 38 minutes 47 seconds, the distance being twice around a six-mile triangular course.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Vaino Kokkinen, Finland, tough defending champion in Greco-Roman Olympic wrestling, neared a decision over Jean Piodeak, Germany, last night to virtually clinch the 1932 middleweight title. Kokkinen defeated Emile Yvllus, France, in the first round, and has only to meet Axel Cadier, Sweden, who has one defeat against him, to defend his crown.

Fight Results

At St. Louis—Lou Terry knocked out Jack Sharkey, 4 rounds.

At San Francisco—Andy Divodi-Joe Glick bout declared no contest by referee, seventh round; Bob O'Hara knocked out Billy Hughes, 2 rounds.

At Long Branch, N. J.—Ray Meyers defeated Steve Smith, 10 rounds.

At New York—Larry Marinucci defeated George Boyce, 8 rounds.

At San Diego, Cal.—Sig Berglund defeated Gaston LaCadre, 10 rounds.

LEGION SERIES EVEN

ST. MARY'S, W. Va., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—St. Mary's turned the tables on Morgantown yesterday and won, 10 to 3, to even the three-game series for the state American Legion junior baseball championship. The third and deciding game will be played today.

CUBS SIGN KOENIG

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—The Chicago Cubs have announced the signing of Infielder Mark Koenig, former star of the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers. He will join the Cubs in Pittsburgh next Thursday. He was purchased from Milwaukee, of the Coast League.

Final contests of the third annual Pittsburgh public parks championships on the Frick Park gallery rectangles top interesting local tennis week-end today. Included, likewise, on the bill are windup tussles of the P. T. A. interclub loop Section II campaign, while at Allegheny Country Club the Sewickley Heights proteges of Mentor Julius Boise entertain the Pittsburgh Golf Club crew, coached by Warren Krueger, in a special team fracas.

Frank Broida, Harvard southpaw, and Mrs. Jean Artzberger, Mt. Lebanon star, once more stand forth as commanding figures of the municipal event. This duo, twice winners of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph challenge cups, today seek their third consecutive Steel City parks titles. Broida battles Harry Wald, slim Pitt ace, who lost to him in the 1931 interpark semi-finals, while Mrs. Artzberger encounters Mrs. Helene Kauffeld, a newcomer from Germany.

Broida eliminated Al Lazar, another Harvard hope, 6-3, 6-0, 6-3, in the penultimate frame yesterday, with Wald rallying to down Buck Maits, University of Pennsylvania driver, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3, in the same bracket.

Sam Keller's Duquesne Librarians carry forlorn hope to Rockwood this afternoon as the P. T. A. lower division season terminates. By blanking the pace-setting Dixon host, the Library outfit can seize first place and the right to meet South Hills, Section I tail-ender, next Saturday for upper sector post in 1933. Possibility of a 9-0 verdict for Duquesne, though, is most remote.

FINNS AROUSE BITTERNESS

Lehtinen's heels. With five laps to go, Hill had split the Finnish tandem of Lehtinen and Virtanen, the latter dropping behind rapidly.

Going into the last lap, Lehinen, plainly worried by Hill's persistence in sticking so close to a world record-holder, spurted. He could not shake off the American, however, and it looked as though Hill was primed to uncork the same sort of finishing spurt that left Lehtinen behind in the trials.

As they hit the last turn, Lehtinen started to go wide from the pole position, carrying Hill with him, into the third lane from the inside. Seeing his way blocked on the outside Hill, still within only a stride of his rival, turned to seek an open way on the inside. As he did so the American momentarily checked his stride, whereupon Lehtinen, instead of continuing the path he had selected, cut over sharply himself, to be in front of Hill once more.

HILL CHECKS STRIDE

This was where the crowd first began to sense what was going on and its first roar of protest echoed through the stadium. Again Hill tried to get around his rival, to straighten out for the final dash, but Lehtinen, looking over his shoulder, once more anticipated the move. They were almost shoulder to shoulder then and close to the tape, which Lehtinen broke first by a matter of inches.

Like the flashing beacon that it was on a stormy day, Bill Carr's crowning triumph in the 400 meters, giving the United States its first sweep of the three Olympic short distance races in 20 years, stamped the little thoroughbred from Arkansas and Penn as the greatest quarter-miler of all time.

Before the race, there were still a few "die-hards" who would not bring themselves to believe that Carr was the master of Ben Eastman, the Pacific Coast favorite. Carr defeated Eastman in the Intercollegiates at Berkeley and in the final American tryouts at Palo Alto. There are no "die-hards" today.

Big Ben himself, after it was all over and he had run his heart out in vain, said to Gus Kirby, the American chief judge.

"Bill's just too fast for me. You don't need to sympathize. I know when I'm licked by a better runner."

Carr's mark of 46.2 wiped out everything in the books or on the cuff, including the official world mark of 47 seconds, held by Bud Spencer; the unofficial time of 46.9, credited to Carr himself in the final trials; the old Olympic mark of 47.6 set by Eric Liddell in the 1924 final and Carr's own short-lived time of 47.2 made in the semi-finals yesterday.

CHARLES IN LEAD

While all these exciting events were featuring the day and the United States was boosting its overwhelming point total to 180 for 18 events, with 10 individual men's track and field titles won, the American hopes in the decathlon were sent soaring by the sensational start of Wilson (Buster) Charles, Oneida Indian from Kansas. Charles jumped and raced out in front of the all-round field, with five events to go today, by amassing 4266.20 points for the first five contests. Meanwhile Jim Bausch, also of Kansas, and American champion, was in fifth place, going strong, with 4029.35.

Charles won the broad jump at 23 feet 9 inches, the high jump at 6 feet 1 inch, while Bausch topped the field in the shotput with 50 feet 3⅛ inches.

Mangin sprang a decided upset in the semi-finals yesterday when he eliminated Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans, winner of five consecutive tournaments including the National Intercollegiates. The scores were 3-6, 8-6, 7-5, 6-2. Wood defeated Davey Jones, of New York, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 8-6.

NOTED TENNIS STARS ENTER TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Ranking stars of France, England and Japan have entered for the National tennis championships at Forest Hills, September 3-10, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today, making the field one of the strongest and most cosmopolitan of recent years.

The English team of H. W. (Bunny) Austin, Fred Perry, J. S. Olliff and Edward Avory is en route to this country with the United States Davis Cup forces and are due in New York Tuesday. Henri Cochet and Marcel Bernard sail August 10 and Jiro Satoh and T. Kuwabara, of Japan, will sail from England tomorrow.

The field thus will include nine of the first 10 players of the world, Jean Borotra being the only ranking player missing, and Ellsworth Vines, Jr., will have his hands full defending the title he won last year in a sensational final with George M. Lott, Jr.

It has been four years since a foreign player won the American title, Cochet being the last in 1928. Rene LaCoste won in 1926 and 1927. Those are the only three times it has been taken by outsiders.

Chilly Sauce

By Charles J. Doyle

Bill McKechnie's Braves have been in the first division practically all through the long competition, but the Tribe has only a scant margin on fourth place over the Dodgers today. Max Carey's club, by the way, has been a revelation since it returned to home scenes

The Dodgers in fifth place are only seven games away from the pace-setting Buccos. That statement in itself is sufficient to classify the present fight in the senior league as the best the circuit has known in its long history.

Sandwiched between the Pirates and Dodgers are the Cubs, Phillies and Braves, all of whom hold flag aspirations. There is a greater difference between the first and second position clubs of the American League than that which exists between the first-place Freebooters and the fifth-place entry from Brooklyn.

Earl Sheely, one of the best fielding firstbasemen baseball has produced, has just been given his unconditional release by the Los Angeles Club of the Pacific Coast League. Earl doubtless owned a contract which prevented a sale to another club and he is now free to sign with any team. Sheely has many friends and admirers in Pittsburgh who became attached to him when he did his trick for the Buccos.

Ollie Carnegie and Frank Packard are Native Sons who are going great guns for their respective clubs in the International League. Carnegie plays the outfield for the Buffalo club while Packard is performing at third for the Baltimore Orioles.

The Pittsburghers are close to the top of the INT hitters and both are swatting homers in profusion. Scouts have studied the two clever athletes. Ray Schalk is manager of the Buffalo team, and it is felt that Ollie will advance to the White Sox as that club has a hookup with the Bisons.

Hawthorne Handicap Draws 17 Entries

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—With seventeen of the best handicap horses named to try for the big purse, the sixth renewal of the Hawthorne Handicap today promised to be a scramble from start to finish.

The test, at a mile and a furlong, carried $25,000 in added money, and with all 17 facing the starter, would be worth $36,000, with $29,000 going to the winner.

As has been the custom this season, the east put forward the favorites. Blenheim and Faireno, the Belair Stud and Wheatley stable, fresh from eastern triumphs, were held at 8 to 5. The hope of the West was Pittsburgher, who showed his best form in winning at Hawthorne earlier in the week.

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

From Which M. G. M. Has Made A Motion Picture Starring Marion Davies

By FRANCES MARION

Blondie Gets Part in Follies Through the Influence Of Larry Belmont

CHAPTER XII.

"Hello, Larry!" the man greeted in a pleasant voice, as he entered the box.

"Hello, Flo!" said Larry, rising.

"You should know this show by heart . . ," and Flo grinned good-naturedly.

"Heart is right . . . This is little Miss McClune——Mr. Ziegfeld," said Larry.

"Good evening, Miss McClune," said Ziegfeld cordially.

Blondie acknowledged the introduction with bated breath. So this was the great Ziegfeld—the creator of the Follies—the man who made the world conscious of the beauty of American women! Blondie watched excitedly as the two men looked wisely at each other. Then Ziegfeld turned to Blondie, casting an interesting eye over her as he asked:

"Do you like the show?"

"It was beautiful . . ." replied Blondie, groping for a more adequate expression. Then Larry helped her out, saying quickly:

"Little Miss McClune is a friend—or was a friend of our Lurline . . ."

"Oh! . . . Indeed!" replied Ziegfeld.

"And she would like to see back stage, please, Mr. Ziegfeld," said Larry.

START FOR BACK STAGE

"Come along," was the instant invitation. "I'm going back now."

Blondie was on her feet before he had finished. Back stage at the Follies . . . and with Mr. Ziegfeld himself! Blondie had never been behind the scenes of any theater, and to think that this was going to really happen to her now . . . It was beyond her comprehension, and she followed quickly as Ziegfeld indicated he would lead the way through the dimly lighted hallways and stairs.

Before she realized it, Blondie was ushered through a heavy door that led directly onto the mammoth stage. She took several steps forward, and then stopped in bewilderment. Hundreds of people were rushing madly back and forth. Huge pieces of towering scenery moved around as if by magic. Great brightly painted curtains went up and down noiselessly. There were endless orders, commands and shouts, given in quiet but penetrating voices.

ENDLESS CONFUSION

As Blondie slowly grew accustomed to the shadowed lights, she began distinguishing objects moving in endless confusion. Girls—it seemed there were thousands of them—hurried back and forth across the stage in every conceivable kind of costume. Shapely legs flashed quickly in fast walks or half runs. A clown practiced a few quick dance steps. An acrobatic dance team were limbering up in the wings. A dozen girls in bright short pants, flame-colored brassieres, and small, jaunty caps, lined up unevenly near Blondie, all fixing hurriedly some part of their scanty costume.

Blondie watched the approach of a gorgeous creature, with flaming red hair, topped by a high, stiff hat of vivid colors; the rest of her costume was a huge red bow around her waist. Blondie was rudely awakened from her daze when she was nearly knocked down by two men carrying a piece of scenery. Their gruff commands of "Heads up!" went unheard as the orchestra started playing loudly in the pit. Blondie pulled herself together and edged toward a piece of scenery to watch the next number from the wings.

"Hey, get back there, will you?" cried an assistant stage manager.

SPEAKS FOR BLONDIE

"Oh, sorry!" said Blondie, thoroughly excited. The more she moved the more she got in the way of men carrying props, girls trouping on for the next number, or dancers practicing. Then Blondie turned suddenly to see Larry watching her amusedly. She hurried to him, started to speak, stopped, then blurted out:

"Could you speak to Mr. Ziegfeld now?" What made her say it right then Blondie never knew. She expected to be told to keep quiet, that this madly rushing place was no time for such things. Instead, Larry said:

"Okay—wait here!" and walked away a few steps to Ziegfeld.

Synopsis

Blondie McClune and Lottie Callahan, friends since childhood, work in the same store. After work one evening, Lottie says she has a date and asks Blondie to join her. Blondie disapproves. Two men wait for them outside the building. When one becomes too familiar with her, Blondie slaps his face and goes home alone, to the poor section of the city. Later the two girls argue about the date and it ends in a rough and tumble fight. Blondie's dress is torn and she decides to get a new one. Looking for some money she had saved, she discovers that somebody has taken it. She greets her ailing dad when he arrives home and learns that he has lost his job. Lottie leaves home in quest of a career. After a few months, under the name of Lurline Cavendish, she becomes the newest sensation of the Follies. She visits the McClunes, but is anxious to get away from the place she once called her home. Blondie is self-conscious when she meets Larry Belmont, a young broker. Lurline becomes angry with Blondie for accepting a theater invitation from Larry.

Now Go On

Blondie could not hear their conversation, but Ziegfeld turned and looked at her searchingly. She could not help fidgeting—almost shaking with nervousness, she thought. Blondie might have done more than fidget, had she heard the conversation between Larry and the producer.

"She is the kind you need—fresh and young. She's a good kid, too!" Ziegfeld smiled at Larry as much as to say, "I've heard you before!"

"Maybe!" was all he said aloud. Then turning from Larry he called, "O'Brien!"

Blondie saw an authoritative man, in his shirt sleeves, hurry up to Ziegfeld. The producer said something to him quietly. O'Brien turned and looked her up and down with an experienced eye. Try as she would to be calm, Blondie started to fidget again.

"Come here—you!" and O'Brien motioned to Blondie. As she stepped over to him, he asked: "Can you dance?"

Before she could answer Blondie was glad that Larry and Ziegfeld had sauntered away. Then she looked appealingly at O'Brien.

LARRY THANKS PRODUCER

"Oh, well, what difference does it make?" smiled O'Brien, not waiting for an answer. "This is your big break, Blondie. Report to the dancing studio tomorrow morning." Before she could even say thank you, O'Brien was gone and Blondie stood looking after him open-mouthed. As he passed out of sight Blondie sided up to a piece of scenery, her mind in a whirl. In the Follies! Oh, it was impossible! There was a gag in it somewhere and tomorrow . . . Blondie couldn't think coherently . . . the lights . . . the music . . . the dancing girls . . . Mr. Ziegfeld . . . Larry . . . Oh, it was only a dream . . . and when tomorrow came she'd be back in the Odds and Ends . . . in the basement of Lacy's store.

As Larry and Ziegfeld walked away, Larry said:

O'Brien turned and looked her up and down with an experienced eye.

"Thanks, old kid!" giving the producer a friendly pat on the shoulder. "I'll do the same for you some day!"

"Don't mention it," said Ziegfeld, as they approached the stairs leading to the dressing rooms. Then glancing up Ziegfeld saw Lurline coming down the iron steps, and he added with a smile, "Until next time."

Larry laughingly followed Ziegfeld's gaze, and gave the producer a knowing look as Ziegfeld sauntered away while Larry waited for Lurline.

"I'm getting your little friend in the Follies," announced Larry as Lurline reached the foot of the stairs.

"What for?" Lurline asked anxiously.

"She's cute. She'll earn twice the money here as she can get at the store."

"Oh, she's been telling you about the store!" Lurline looked at Larry closely.

Just how much had Blondie been telling this prize catch of New York? Oh, what a fool she had been to let Blondie out alone with Larry, Lurline thought.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Tells Noel Why Ronald Is Rushing Her

As Mary's voice with its appeal to Noel came to our ears from the curtained recess of the living room, Lillian and I walked away as hastily as we could without calling attention to our movements. But as we went we heard Noel's voice, low, but with a husky strained note in it, replying to her question.

"Of course I'll do anything you wish. It's sweet of you to tell me about it. But I shall be glad when it's over."

"I won't keep it up longer than I have to do," Mary replied. "And if you want to, you can read Whitman with—"

AWARE OF PRESENCE

We were out of earshot before she finished, but I guessed the disgusted objurgation that must have burst from Noel's lips before she finished her sentence with the name of Avis Arlen, as she patently intended doing.

"The little devil!" Lillian murmured as we skirted the dancers, now aware of our presence and gaily waving to us, and sat down on a couch at the far end of the room. "She'll be riding him for that when they're 90."

"Yes," I agreed, for I had said the same thing to myself when I had witnessed Mary's first interview with Noel after he had come back from the summer trip with his father in which Avis Arlen had figured so conspicuously. "But at least she had told him about the little comedy she intends staging with Ronald."

"Saving much breakage of the furniture," Lillian answered grimly. "I fancy our Noel has a temper of his own when jealousy is riding him."

I nodded, with my eyes fixed upon the curtained recess from which Mary was coming alone. She started as she saw us, then with her hand flung aloft in a gay little salutation, she crossed the room to us.

"Everything always falls in my lap," she said. "I thought I'd have to go out hunting for you. I have the good word for you."

"And that is?" I asked, relieved that she had not guessed we had overheard her.

"You can ring up the curtain, if you wish," she said. "I've fixed things up with the boy friend. He's willing that I should play the role if I don't magnify it."

I explained briefly why Ronald was keeping Hank engaged, and she laughed gleefully.

"Some sheiks, the Harrison brothers!" she commented. "If they're beginning this way when they are still in preparatory school, what will they be when they get to college? You needn't answer that question, it's purely rhetorical. Just give me my instructions, only remember, Auntie Madge, what I told you. I hain't goin' to be no pursuing female. Ronald's got to do the rushing."

"He will," I said. "Suppose you stay here and talk to Aunt Lillian while I set things in motion. I don't need to give you any instructions upon how to play your role," I added slyly. "You're letter perfect."

"Miauw, miauw!" she sent after me softly as I walked toward Hank and Ronald, but I did not turn my head. When I reached the boys I put my hand upon Hank's shoulder.

"Will you go up to my room, dear, and bring me a plaid scarf that's lying on the table?"

"Sure thing!" Hank replied.

NOEL UNDERSTANDS

"Everything is all ready for you and Mary to stage your little comedy," I said. "Mary has told Noel about it, so that he understands and will not interfere. Wait till Hank brings back my scarf—Marion is seeing everything out of the back of her head this evening, and I don't want her to suspect my hand in this—then after I've gone back to my seat, wait a little while, and then lay apparent seige to Mary. If I might suggest—dance with Marion first, and drop an admiring casual comment upon Mary's marvelous dancing and her especially attractive get-up this evening."

"Yes, I'll do that," Ronald said absently, then added quickly: "You said Marion is seeing everything this evening. Do you mean that— that—"

I smiled at him, and made prompt response.

"That she's 'sitting up and taking notice' of your apparent defection. Indeed she is. You have the game in your own hands, my dear boy, if you'll nerve yourself to go through with it, and play your role so convincingly that she takes it for the truth."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Frank Buck, the man who produced "Bring 'Em Back Alive," the sensational animal picture now showing at the Warner Theater and which will be at the Enright soon for the members of the Junior Komic Club, presented to John H. Harris, general manager of Warner theaters in the Pittsburgh area, a brown cub bear which he captured while making this picture.

This bear is a frisky little fellow and likes to drink pop and eat candy. Mr. Harris, although living in one of the pent houses atop the Royal York Apartments, could not keep his new "pal" at home, so he is now one of the star boarders of the Highland Park Zoo.

Knowing that all youngsters are fond of animals, Mr. Harris has arranged for his bear—which incidentally has been named Warner—to visit several of the Komic Club meetings.

APPEARS TODAY

Starting today the "Warner" bear will make a personal appearance at the Enright Theater Junior Komic Club meeting at 11 o'clock and after performing all his tricks will then be taken to the Belmar Theater for the members to see and enjoy when they meet at 12:30.

This is just one of the many features of "kiddie" entertainment arranged for the members each week.

At the Arsenal Theater this morning the meeting will be conducted by a new set of officers elected last week. They are: Mike Ribich, grand jester; Betty Richards, Josephine Baran, Adeline Ciancio, Betty Racki, Thomas Hart and Howard Morris as members of the board of governors.

STAGE ATTRACTION

Thomas Bart .....
.."Wild Man From Borneo"
Betty Richards, Alberta Fundi, Josephine Land and Josephine Baran .....
..... Prancing Ponies
John Hilliard and Josephine Kane .....Clowns
Mike Ribich .....Farmer
Russell Niggl .....Ticket Seller

Those in the chorus were: Francis Kane, Angeline Kane, Minnie Fundo, Adeline Ciancio and Francis Ciancio.

Each week the members of the Arsenal Chapter are entertained by some little playlet staged and directed by Mrs. Irene Richards and Russell Niggl, who, by the way, is the assistant manager of the Arsenal Theater and a great favorite with the youngsters.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph - Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend, to the Secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card and button will be mailed you.

Belmar—Robert Long, Leonard Rosenberg, Robert Kohl, Ida Nessbauer, Jack McGregor.

Plaza—Herbert Raith.

Rowland—Ralph Patton.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Gift Unforgotten

She had a lovely, elfin grace,
A smile that could all doubt disarm,
And she was sweet and fair of face,
With woodland lure and pixie charm.

Her suitors brought her pearls and jade
When she was young and proud and gay.
Rare books and carvings quaintly made;
But one brought just a roundelay.

He brought a little song, which told
The April wonder of her eyes,
Her smile's swift magic to unfold
The gates that lead to Paradise.

The pageant of the years went by;
Her pearls and jade were toys outgrown
With that bright, springtime witchery
That those who loved her well had known.

She now forgets all other things
Which once her suitors joyed to give;
But in her heart his song still sings;
There, still, his muted measures live!

Anyway, what I had in mind was that if the federal Counterfeiting laws could be repealed, I might arrange, at great personal sacrifice, to supply this money on very short notice. LOS ANGELES. — This year, there will be none of those nasty disputes over who has broken Olympic records and why. Officials have seen to that by equipping all timers with the new improved Goldberg Thermal Gravity Time-Stabilizer. A block of ice is supported at each end, so that its middle can be embraced by a thin wire, to which is attached a weight. The wire gradually cuts its way through the ice until the weight falls to the ground and taps a bell. If runners reach the finish line before the bell rings, a new record has been established and three cheers will be given with a right good will.

Another Canal Setback

There Is Still Ground for Hope That the Project Will Be Realized—Comment on Local News.

The United States engineers' report disapproving the proposal that the Beaver, Mahoning and Shenango Rivers be made navigable for steamboats is disappointing, especially because of its possibly adverse effect on the project to link the Ohio River with Lake Erie through a canal along the Beaver-Mahoning route. There is no reason, however, to give up the plan in discouragement.

The improvement of the Beaver, Mahoning and Shenango as an independent project is a different matter from improving them as links in a Lake Erie and Ohio River canal, and there is ground for hope that the canal project will yet be realized. The canal plan is not being considered by the same body that reported against the river improvements.

It must be admitted that from the outset the authorities at Washington have given the canal advocates little encouragement. The report of Col. Kutz some years ago that the project was "economically inadvisable" was a severe blow. Nevertheless, the benefits that the waterway would bring are so obvious that it is incredible that it will not be constructed eventually.

*If it should come to the worst, and all hope of ob-*taining the canal by the Beaver-Mahoning route should be lost, it might be worth Pittsburgh's attention to look to the French Creek route favored by business interests in the upper Allegheny. L. H. Gavin, secretary of the Oil City Chamber of Commerce, asserts a canal from Franklin to Lake Erie can be built for $25,000,000.

If to the cost of a canal from Franklin to Lake Erie be added the estimate of $25,000,000 for completing the improvement of the Allegheny River between Pittsburgh and Franklin, we have a total of $50,000,000, as Mr. Gavin figures it, as the expense of a navigable waterway between this city and the Great Lakes. That compares favorably with the estimated cost of other routes.

For the French Creek route there would not be available the heavy tonnage that would be carried by a Beaver-Mahoning canal tapping the rich New Castle and Youngstown industrial districts. Our friends on the upper Allegheny tell us, however, that Pittsburgh would be better off with a canal that did not also serve competing steel companies in Ohio.

Mr. Gavin asserts that 18,000,000 tons of coal would move annually through the French Creek canal to the Great Lakes, and that 14,000,000 tons of iron ore would pass through the canal from the Great Lakes to Pittsburgh mills. The canal might go far towards reviving our prostrated coal industry, crippled by unfair railroad rates to the lakes.

An illuminating study of the causes of the decline of our soft coal industry has just been published by the Greater Pennsylvania Council. The state's output fell from 172,000,000 tons in 1923 to 97,000,000 tons last year. West Virginia and Kentucky, with railroad rates to the Lakes ridiculously low in comparison with what Pittsburgh operators have to pay, have taken the business away from us.

The Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company has done well in restoring Sunday bus service between the downtown section and Mt. Lebanon. Nobody desires the company to operate more coaches than are necessary, and if one coach is sufficient where two were formerly employed there will be no complaint. It is gratifying to note that the company was persuaded to resume the service through an amicable conference.

*Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the Homicide Squad, de-*clares that if the police do not arrest the slayers of the Volpes the slayers will be killed by surviving members of the Volpe gang. But that, of course, does not excuse the police from arresting the killers. If the Volpes' gangster friends are able to find the murderers, professional detectives ought also to be able to find them.

The city administration, through what looks like a subterfuge, has cut the pensions of retired policemen from $86 to $51.60 a month. The public, seeing all this slashing of municipal expenses, this cutting of wages and dismissal of city employes, would like very much to know what excuse Mayor Kline and the councilmen can offer for not reducing their own salaries, too.

Disturbing reports are coming in concerning the increase in the number of people in Allegheny County requiring financial relief. A thousand new families are being added weekly to the welfare organizations' lists of applicants. Pressure must be brought to bear on the Legislature to do its duty by appropriating money for the unemployed and providing the means of raising it.

The suggestion of Senator Frank J. Harris that the political leaders of the state meet next week and tell the Legislature what to do offers a possible way of bringing swift action. The lawmakers, floundering about in uncertainty and consuming the taxpayers' money in the expenses of the session, need some masterful person to serve as pilot.

It is to be hoped that the Legislature will be able to raise the money required for unemployment relief in some other manner than through the proposed occupation tax, which would lend itself to all kinds of unfairness. Some of our wealthy gentlemen of leisure, with no occupation, might escape taxation, while poor workers, scarcely able to pay anything, would be assessed.

Did you know that a statue of George Washington 100 feet high is to be erected on Mt. Washington in commemoration of the Washington bicentennial? A 10-foot model, the work of Frank Vittor, Pittsburgh sculptor, is depicted in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph to be issued tomorrow. It shows Washington as a surveyor. Vittor has done good work.

The American Weekly, distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will have a notable article on recent discoveries in the Holy Land. The very spot where Christ performed the miracle of the loaves and fishes and fed the multitude has been found. The article is profusely illustrated. Many other interesting things will be found in the American Weekly.

Simple Simon Sam

(Copyright, 1932.)

Like the simpleton who went fishing in a pail, Uncle Sam keeps casting for revenue into a system of UNWISE, UNJUST taxation which fails to yield funds sufficient to meet the costs of government.

A 5 per cent manufacturers' Sales Tax, as an integral part of a system which included excises from light wines and beers, would provide, surely and easily, revenue sufficient to permit the doing away with the nuisance and special taxes and the reduction of income taxes.

The Sales Tax has been a success wherever tried.

It would prove a success here.

Congress must turn to it eventually. Why not at the next session?

After a few years of married life, a man won't even commit himself so far as to predict who'll win the next election or what the weather will be—for fear his wife will hold him to it.

Why should a man get excited when the skin begins to show through his top hair? A woman must be good to look at in order to get anything worthwhile out of life. But a man's "fatal beauty" was never more than two per cent of his charm, anyway.

Habit, convenience, congeniality and community interests are bonds between a husband and wife, which will outlive the rosiest romance.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—I might have expected it. Because I cooped myself up to work all evening, my wife thinks up entertaining company in the other room, reading excerpts from some of my youthful love letters. Let them laugh! Their tittering means no more than that to me.

I know what they are shrieking about now. That's where I wrote I was going to work my fingers to the bone for her. What's comic about that? Anyway, I was too young to know what I was writing. It all wouldn't sound so funny if they'd yank me out of the river some time with sea weeds entwined in my hair.

That's Ryley Cooper reading one with gestures: "I would, my darling, that my poor tongue could whisper my worship of you." Maybe he could do better. He does not take into consideration I was just over the hives and all dosed up with sulphur and molasses.

There's some more of it: "Now is the springtime of our love. I would that I were a bird, pecking crumbs before your open window." A little lalo at that. I cannot imagine myself pecking crumbs—not with my appetite. Still that was years ago and I was so puny they thought I had the rickets.

I suppose none of them ever wrote love letters. No sir—they're great big he-men who snatched their ladies on horseback and galloped off to a mountain cave. I'm glad of the poet in me. I hope they don't find that one about "the aimless ache of the forgotten lover."

It's getting hotter than all get out in here. My face seems to be blazing. Perhaps I have a fever. But no one shall know. I'll just let myself waste slowly away. Some day they'll remember the pale, wan smile. And perhaps they will laugh at that, too.

* * *

There they go again—off in a whoop. I think it's rather good at that. You know I was only 17 and grandma never expected to raise me. Cooper is still reading. Like this: "My heart is a freshet of affection (loud laughter) and rushes toward you like a river racing to the sea." Now they are positively hysterical. And they've started to wisecrack. Gene Crawley yells through the closed doors. "Come on in here, little freshet, and put on a rush to the sea!" I'll act as though I didn't hear. What do those no-goods know of tenderness. Little do they reck that behind this icy exterior beats the heart of a sentimentalist.

* * *

I knew it. They've got hold on that one I wrote when Alf Resener, Ned Deletombe, George Bratt and I were camping on Raccoon Creek. I can recite it from memory: "Every frog croaks of thee. Far away is the anguished cry of a coyote. He knows the despair of an aching heart." Now they are singing, "The Curse of an Aching Heart." That's how much romance they have in their filthy make-up. Of course, there weren't any coyotes in Ohio, but something was howling that night. Anyway, why bother with them. From now on I merely bow in passing.

* * *

Still I can't go on working if they read that one where I was going to end it all off the deep end of the wharfboat if she went buggy-riding with that fellow from Pt. Pleasant—the one with the red puff tie. They've read it, for they are singing: "I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You."

* * *

Now they have quieted. All in a whisper. I suppose they are sorry for their shabby trick. I'll go in and shame them. I'll act as though nothing has happened and in a forlorn voice mummur casually: "I love to see my friends having such a happy time. I hope you'll always feel my poor house is yours." Then I'll go over and stand by the window, looking out into the night, all beaten. In the pig's eye, I will. They're off again. Emma Detwiller is reading now. That one winding up with: "What is this mockery we call life, without you? Tomorrow I'm off for far-flung corners of the earth—across trackless jungles, through the snows of Alaska, to Bombay, Singapore. While I drift, have a little thought for a beachcomber who, under a tropical moon on a world's outer rim, dreams fitfully of you."

* * *

I can't stand any more. Things like that wear you down. My side is killing me. I'll pop in and tell them where to get off. It isn't necessary. They've thrown open the doors and Ryley Cooper yells: "Behold, the fitful dreamer!" Is that so? Well, I'd like to see what kind of a Romeo act he could put on with that bald bean. Him and his freckles!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Do not grow so cold and hard when someone mentions your grief. Do not feel resentful, or try to shut the memory away, even from yourself.

Dare to remember grief. Dare to discuss and share its memory. Dare to explore the dark and beautiful adventure of suffering.

For grief is more than a painful, personal experience. Grief is one of the great milestones in the progress of your life. Grief is an initiation into the mysteries of life. Grief is an opportunity for your spirit to be born again—taller and more splendid.

Happy lives are little lives. They do not see beyond their rose-wreathed walls. They know nothing of the deep, dark valleys, and the shining peaks, and the vast, crowded highways that lie beyond those walls. They do not know the trails that other men must follow, the burdens they must bear.

HAPPY LIVES DO NOT KNOW THEIR OWN WEAKNESS, OR THEIR OWN STRENGTH. THEIR BOASTS AND THEIR LAMENTATIONS ARE EQUALLY SHALLOW, FOR THEY DO NOT REALIZE WHAT LIFE CAN DO TO THE SOUL.

So happy lives are walled lives, ignorant lives. But those whose hearts are broken have been given a chance to find freedom and wisdom.

Grief is an open door into the fullness of life, and into every other heart that has suffered.

Eyes that have wept know what lies behind all other eyes; and no heart is shut against them, if they will enter lovingly.

GRIEF IS THE GREATEST OF ALL HUMAN BONDS.

ALL THE GOLD IN THE WORLD CANNOT BUY THE COMMUNION WHICH IS YOURS IF YOU, TOO, HAVE KNELT BESIDE A GRAVE. NEITHER A THRONE NOR A SWORD COULD GIVE YOU THE POWER WHICH WILL COME IF YOU SHARE YOUR TEARS.

But you must be willing to share, or grief cannot do these things for you. You cannot hoard your tears or wall away your grave, and yet find this communion.

GRIEF IS THE GRIMMEST AND THE LONELIEST EXPERIENCE ON EARTH, IF YOU KEEP IT TO YOURSELF.

GRIEF IS THE RICHEST AND THE LOVELIEST EXPERIENCE OF THE SOUL, IF YOU SHARE IT WITH OTHERS.

Share your grief. Be humble about it. Look at it simply, putting away your bitter arrogance.

See, dear? Your grief is not different. It is all-of-a-piece with other grief.

That child you lost was no dearer to you than other little ones are to their fathers or mothers. That husband you adored; that sweet, lost wife; that gentle mother—the love you bore them and the sorrow you feel over their suffering or loss, are but a part of the universal mystery of love, in which even the commonest man has a part.

Does it hurt your pride a little to feel that your grief is like all other grief? Does it rob you of a certain bitter feeling of superiority? Perhaps. We human beings have a curious, sick conceit. But see what you gain in place of that which you lose!

YOU GAIN THE HEART OF ALL THE WORLD.

NEVER AGAIN WILL YOU BE ALONE; NEVER AGAIN NEED YOU FEEL USELESS AND ABANDONED—IF YOU WILL SHARE YOUR TEARS.

FOR YOU WILL HAVE ENTERED INTO A NEW SERVICE. YOU WILL UNDERSTAND THINGS WHICH HAPPY LIVES CANNOT UNDERSTAND. YOU WILL SPEAK A LANGUAGE WHICH LAUGHING LIPS HAVE NEVER LEARNED. YOU WILL BE ABLE TO BIND UP WOUNDS WHICH CAREFREE FINGERS COULD NOT TOUCH.

AND IN HEALING THOSE OTHER WOUNDS YOU WILL FIND HEALING FOR YOUR OWN.

Honest, you did not cheat in examinations, but your standings were poor because you would not study enough.

You did not propose to lose any sleep—not you.

You never missed a chance of movies or social gathering for study.

At home you were more interested in telephone calls and the callers your mother received, and what you were to have at meals than you were in concentrated study in homework periods.

Every ring of the bell sent you to the door even when you had someone in the house who was paid to admit visitors.

Any interruption was preferable to a quiet hour spent in real study.

So you slid along through your school days and now you are sorry you wasted opportunities that can never come back.

But aren't you still wasting time which might be more profitably spent?

How much more do you know than you did one year ago?

What have you done to make a definite advance in the quality of your efforts and their results?

Now It Can Be Told

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

In the campaign of 1888 the country was startled with the story of the "Dudley Blocks of Five" scheme, which meant nothing other than a plan to buy voters in these blocks. It was the scandal of the campaign, and while it did not affect the election results, it remains to this day one of the bizarre tricks of politics that men talk about.

And yet to this day few of the public generally, and very few privately, have known just how the Democrats were able to get the proof. For they had the proof in the form of a telegram.

I have known for 12 years the story of how this telegram came into the possession of the Democrats. There were reasons why it could not be told. Now it can be told. Everyone involved is dead. The man who got the telegram and gave it to the press was Jerry Foley, an ardent Indianapolis Democrat. I had the story from his own lips.

* * *

His Opportunity Came

He was an active worker in politics all his life. His brother at one time was in the office of the United States Marshal in Indianapolis. Jerry himself was a telegrapher. At one time, years ago, he worked with another telegrapher named Thomas Edison. The latter became the inventor of immortal fame.

In the campaign of 1888 Foley was with the Western Union in Indianapolis. That year the management of the Western Union there was in ardent sympathy with Harrison. The Republicans had no trouble knowing what the Democrats were sending over the wire. Their leaders looked over the Democratic messages right in the office.

All this was maddening to Foley, the ardent supporter of Cleveland. But he was helpless. He needed his job. He was one of the few Democratic telegraphers.

Then one day his opportunity came.

A telegram was brought into the room and turned over to a woman telegrapher. It was brought in by a Republican politician. Foley knew it had political significance. It was handled so carefully from the outside he suspected it might be important.

The Telegram Changed Hands

The woman to whom it was turned over left the room for a minute or so before doing anything with it.

During her absence, with no one paying any attention, he passed her desk, hastily read the telegram—it was the "Dudley Blocks of Five" telegram. He fixed the exact wording in his mind; hurried back to his desk; wrote it out.

Then he waited until time to leave work and telephoned the political reporter on the Indianapolis Sentinel with instructions.

These instructions were for the reporter to meet him on a certain obscure street in the outskirts of the town.

The two men met.

The telegram changed hands.

There was an understanding that for months if the two men met on the streets there was to be no signs of recognition.

That part of the bargain was carried out.

The reporter hurried back to the office and turned his find over to the editor of the paper.

The next morning it appeared in the press all over the country.

The Picture of Innocence

For weeks no one was so puzzled about how the thing reached the public as Foley. He was the perfect picture of innocence.

But unhappily he was one of the few Democrats with the Western Union that year and he was known as a fighting Irish Democrat.

Suspicion turned on him, and at length the manager of the Western Union called him into his office.

"Jerry, do you know anything about how this telegram got out?" he was asked.

"Do you mean to insinuate that I do?" he thundered, seething with well simulated indignation.

"Well, you are a Democrat and some one passed it out."

"I want to know whether this is a charge or an insinuation," thundered Foley. "If it is, I promise you an opportunity to prove it, for I shall sue the Western Union to the limit."

"Now don't get mad, Jerry, no one is insinuating anything. We are just asking all the operators if they know anything."

"Then don't ask me," said Foley, threateningly, "I don't care for that kind of attention."

Service Greater Than the Reward

He then was a young man. He remained a telegrapher for very many years. He always remained a Democrat and a fighting Democrat. He sought no office. Many years later when the late John W. Kern, elected to the Senate, became the floor leader of the Democrats in that body, he had some office appointments at his disposal. He knew—he was one of the few who knew—the part Foley had played in the exposure of the "Blocks of Five." He knew Foley had endangered his job, his means of livelihood, to serve his party and incidentally the cause of political decency. And he offered one of the jobs to Foley, who accepted.

Twice before he had a political job within his grasp.

Until a comparatively recent time the Senate had a telegrapher whose business was to send messages from Senators to the departments within the city. That was long before the telephone came into general use at the Capitol. After that there was no real reason for a Senate telegrapher, but after the fashion in politics there was no disposition to eliminate the job. It was an easy job to be passed out as patronage.

In 1884 Thomas A. Hendricks was elected Vice President. He was a friend of Foley and knew of the job because of Foley's long tenure in the Senate. It was his patronage. Meeting Foley on the street in the spring of 1885, he asked him if he would like the place. Foley would. It was then understood that on Hendricks' return to Indianapolis, after the short session, the appointment would be made.

Hendricks returned, fell sick at once, and died. The appointment had not been made.

Years went by. In 1912 another Indiana Vice President thought of Foley for the place and he was assured it would be his. He made all his arrangements to move.

Such is the story of a party worker; his service and his reward. The service was greater than the reward.

EXACT TRUTH

By Winifred Black

We all sat on the broad porch in the moonlight.

Not just plain, ordinary moonlight. This was a streaming, pouring, all-enveloping glory of silver, such as you find once in a lifetime in the high mountains, when the air is sweet with the balsam of pine and wild azaleas, and the Oregon dogwood is white with gracious flowers.

"Once in a lifetime," I said, "just once, you get such a night as this up here in the mountains. How cheap and tawdry and commonplace the rest of the world seems, when you look down on it from such a height as this!"

"Not often," said the quiet man from the corner of the porch. "Not often. I'll grant you: but more than once in a lifetime.

Then we fell to talking of gardens.

"That woman has 40 varieties of roses in her garden," said one who spoke in rapturous soprano.

"Thirty-five varieties," said the man from the corner of the porch.

We spoke of a woman as pretty.

"She is not pretty," said the quiet man. "She is beautiful. There is a kind of radiance about her."

And we all knew exactly what he meant, only we had not been intelligent enough to see it for ourselves.

We have been in company with that man for three days now, and I begin to feel that conversation generally is just a mass of meaningless exaggerations and foolish lack of precision in speech.

This man I find, is a scientist. In his work there can be no "maybe" and "perhaps" and "Well, somewhat like that" form of thought.

A thing is true, or it is false.

He is not contrary or dictatious. He doesn't want to show off. He isn't trying to be disagreeable. He's just absolutely, inexorably honest, and his mind is like a pool of deep, clear water.

It is like coming out of a haze or a fog into the clear sunshine to see a man like that.

I wonder just how silly and stupid we all seem to him?
